Roosevelt Backs "Cash and Carry" Neutrality Plan

President Is Said To Have Preferred Repeal Of the Present Statute

Details of White House Conference Indicate He Favors Return to International Law

Washington, Sept. 20. (AP)—After an extraordinary, bi-partisan White House conference, administration forces in Congress went forward tonight with plans for neutrality legislation repealing the arms embargo and placing all trade with belligerents on a "cash and carry" basis.

According to one person who attended the conference, Mr. Roosevelt indicated a preference for repealing the present neutrality act in its entirety and placing American relations with the warring countries on a basis of international law. He was advised, however, that there was little possibility the Senate would approve such action.

So, after the meeting, Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who was one of those present, told newspapermen he would call up his bill embodying the six-point neutrality program advanced by the administration last spring. He said it would be placed before the committee on Saturday and predicted that group would finish work on the measure in two or three days.

One person who attended the White House conference said that Mr. Roosevelt expressed belief that all would agree with him that the present situation is one of the most serious that the world ever faced. The invasion of Poland by Russia was said to have been mentioned as complicating matters.

The president was said to have observed that the war might last a long time and that if it did it undoubtedly would spread widely. In that case, it was pointed out, there might be numerous belligerents, thus making it far more difficult for the United States to maintain its neutrality.

During the discussion about complete repeal of the neutrality act, Pittman was said to have predicted that not more than five of the Senate foreign relations committee's 23 votes would be for any such plan.

Vice President Garner, it was reported, told the president he always had favored international law as the basis of this country's dealings with other nations. Mr. Roosevelt was said to have indicated his assent to this view.

At the outset of the conference, Mr. Roosevelt was reported to have outlined the workings of international law in various past wars, beginning with the American revolution.

Mr. Roosevelt traced the working of this law down to the present, and he and Pittman then were said to have engaged in a technical conversation as to how such law would

Chamberlain Says Britain Will Save Europe from Nazis

Prime Minister Declares Pace of Advance Will Be Quickened

By J. C. STARK

London, Sept. 20. (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the nation today that Britain's war effort would be "the utmost of which it is capable" and declared "our advance must be orderly but the pace of the advance will steadily quicken."

The government, he told the House of Commons in his third war report, would "not rush into adventures that offer little prospect of success," but he said there was no operation that would be avoided which would "make an appropriate contribution to victory."

The prime minister made these principal points:

One, Soviet Russia's military intervention in Poland was not a complete surprise to the British government, that this "cynical attack" was a tragedy to Poland, but that it was still too early to "pronounce any final verdict" on the motives or consequences of the Russian action.

Two, neither the Russian action nor Adolf Hitler's speech yesterday

Bob Puts Up Fine Fight but Champ Wears Him Down

Joe Lacks Former Fire and Fury, but Packs Dynamite

CHALLENGER TAKES ONLY THREE ROUNDS

Goes Down Four Times in First Round, Later Recovers

(Round by round description of the fight will be found on page 13 of today's News.)

By SID FEDER

Briggs Stadium, Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Minus just about all of the fire and fury that has chopped down his most recent opponents mercilessly, but still packing dynamite in his fists, Joe Louis knocked out Bob Pastor in 11 rounds tonight to retain his world's heavyweight championship.

But he was no longer the Brown Bomber, the dusky destroyer who dynamited Max Schmeling, John Henry Lewis and Tony Galento so completely.

He had Pastor down on the floor four times in the first round from right hand punches, and again in the second the former New York University footballer was on the verge of annihilation. On two other occasions Bob was badly hurt. Yet each time the knockout spark was lacking. Joe was slow to take advantage of the opportunities and seemed unable to box with the gallant rival who came up off the floor, defended beautifully, and even came back to carry the fight to the champion in the later heats.

Ends in Eleventh Round

Pastor tired, however, and that in the end cost him the fight just past the midway mark of the first scheduled 20-round heavyweight title fight in a quarter century. Less than half a minute after the 11th round got under way, Louis suddenly leaped in and fired a short right and Pastor went down.

He rose to his knees at the count of four, but couldn't go any further. There he huddled, head hanging and blood dripping from a cut over his left eye, as Referee Sam Hennessy counted the full ten over him, finishing at the 38 second mark of the round to give Louis the eighth successful defense of his title since he took it from Old Jim Braddock in 1937.

Newspapers Plan To Campaign for Peace

Harrisburg, Sept. 20 (AP)—Pennsylvania publishers today prepared their annual "newspaper prestige week" on a platform to "keep the United States out of war."

The theme of the eighth annual observance — from September 30 to October 7 inclusive — was adopted by the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association.

"It is the desire of the committee that editors made the main theme the determined effort of the newspapers to keep the United States out of war," the P.N.P.A. asserted in a bulletin announcing the plans.

Col. J. Hale Steinman, of Lancaster, president of the association, urged editors to "drive home the one big thought that newspapers are the one outstanding dependable medium for reliable and accurate war news."

Kermit Roosevelt Is Silent on Citizenship

London, Sept. 20. (AP)—Kermit Roosevelt who arrived from the United States last Saturday said tonight he could neither confirm nor deny a report that he would become a British subject.

He was a captain in both the British and the United States armies in the World war.

The son of Theodore Roosevelt who is now vice president of Roosevelt Steamship Lines, said merely he came to this country "on business."

Germans To Withdraw from Present Positions after Destruction of Entire Polish Army

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—The German army turned its attention tonight to liquidation of its virtually completed campaign in Poland.

A delegation of German officers left for Moscow, presumably to settle further Soviet Russian-German collaboration in Eastern Europe while the foreign offices of the two countries discussed plans for division of their interests in Poland.

The Nazi supreme high command disclosed an agreement had been reached on the partition of Poland, at least as far as their armies of occupation are concerned. A high command communique said the demarcation line had been set up but did not say where the line runs.

German forces, it said, would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Mopping up of remnants of the Polish army continued and possibly will go on for a week but these were termed local tasks of minor importance, now that the biggest assembly of Polish troops was said to have been defeated in the bend of the Vistula river north of Lodz.

The high command described this battle as "one of the biggest destructive battles of all time."

Horse and Chicken Thieves All Alike

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (AP)—Parole director Herman M. Moser refused today to parole two chicken thieves on grounds Washington county farmers "view chicken thieves somewhat in the light of horse-thieves."

The statement was made by State's Attorney Charles F. Wagaman of Washington county in opposing paroles for Charles Lucas, serving a year, and Shelly Shrivers, serving two years.

Wagaman said henhouse raiders were hard to catch and convict since they used automobiles.

We'll Get into War, Raymond Moley Says

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Participation of the United States in the European war was held by Raymond Moley today to be "avoidable," but he expressed the opion that "we will ultimately be involved."

Moley, former confidential adviser to President Roosevelt, addressed the annual conference of the National Industrial Advertisers' Association.

"We can become involved either if we really wish to or if we bungle ourselves into it," he said.

The United States, he said, lacks the "habit of neutrality" which has been developed by some of the smaller European countries.

"We like to take sides," he said. "We like to shoot out mouths off."

Second Battle of Jutland Rumored; Many Shots Heard

Loud Explosions Taken To Indicate British and German Clash

FIGHTING SAID TO HAVE BEEN TERRIFIC

Sounds Heard for Miles Along Coast by Many People

By MILO M. THOMPSON

Copenhagen, Sept. 20 (AP) — The possibility that a second battle of Jutland was taking place off Denmark today excited the whole eastern coast of the Jutland peninsula.

Sounds which hearers said were unmistakeably those of gunfire were heard from Skagen, at the northern tip of the peninsula which is Denmark's only continental province, to points northeast of Aalborg, 50 miles to the south.

The explosions were particularly clear on the northern shore of the Island of Loesoe, off the Jutland east coast.

At Berlin, the German high command said it knew nothing of a reported sea battle.

Not Swedish Ships

The Swedish naval attache at Berlin suggested the possibility that Swedish ships were holding target practice, but at Stockholm the admiral of the Western Swedish Naval Division said there were no exercises by his ships today.

The fighting, if such, continued over seven hours, ending at 5 p. m.

(The battle of Jutland in the World War was on May 31, 1916. It started at 3:45 p. m., continuing until some time after 7 p. m. Germans claimed a victory in that the British, with far greater strength, did not inflict a defeat and suffered greater losses in men and ships. However, the German fleet did not appear in the North Sea again until it came out to surrender in November and December, 1918.)

Police Chief Sees Ships

Few of those who sought signs of ships had any success. The exception was the police chief on Laesoe Island, off the coast, who mounted a high tower and used binoculars to view the area from which the sounds seemed to come. He said he saw indistinctly, on the far horison northeast by east a thin line of ships, but that they were at such a distance he was unable to tell if they were fighting ships.

During the firing, fishermen intrepid enough to push into the Strait of Kattegatt between Sweden

Typographical Union Facing Suspension

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor, it was learned tonight, has taken action which may result in suspension of one of its oldest affiliates, the International Typographical Union.

William Green, AFL president, said the ITU's last check for regular per capita taxes had been returned to the union, and that the Typographical organization would be "automatically suspended" if its delegates appeared at the AFL convention in Cincinnati next month unprepared to pay the special assessment arrearage.

The return of the check, Green said, was in accordance with an AFL executive council order after ITU's refusal to pay a special assessment levied in 1937 to provide a war chest to combat CIO organizing campaigns.

Story Given Out in London Is Not Denied, but Details of Alleged Capture Are Entirely Lacking

London, Sept. 21.—(Thursday)—(AP)—The British Press Association said that according to reports prevalent today and not denied, Germany's crack liner Bremen had reached a British port under the escort of naval vessels.

The press association said "for some days various stories have circulated that the Bremen had been captured and was on her way to England. Though no official confirmation was forthcoming in London this morning the story of the liner's capture was not denied."

Mystery has surrounded the Bremen since she left New York Aug. 30.

Reports that the liner had reached a neutral port were never confirmed.

The Bremen sailed from New York on Aug. 30, two days before Germany invaded Poland, and has not been definitely reported since.

Last Saturday the German ambassador to Russia, Count Friedrich von Der Schulenberg, intimated the $20,000,000 pride of the German merchant marine had been captured by Britain.

Referred to Churchill

He said questions concerning the ship should be referred to Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty.

"American authorities," he said, "were so kind as to hold up the Bremen for 22 hours and so far as I know the British have rather fast destroyers."

The Bremen sailed from New York without passengers after being held for lifeboat and other inspections.

On Sept. 12 the British ministry of information authorized publication of a several days old Rotterdam report that the Bremen had acquired status as an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port.

This was denied in Rome.

There were reports the vessel had gone to Iceland, but the Iceland telegraph agency denied these.

Not Seen in Russia

Next, on Sept. 14, information close to Germany's navy said the Bremen had arrived at Murmansk, Russia, after crossing the Atlantic by the most northern route.

On Sept. 16 German Air Minister Herrmann Wilhelm Goering in a speech to munitions workers made a vague reference to the Bremen by stating a British attempt to capture her had "misfired." He said no more.

There were various other reports that the Bremen was heading for a neutral port in Mexico or South America, or had been sunk. None of these was verified.

Rumania Closes Her Frontier to Polish Refugees

German Arrested on Charge of Plotting a Revolution

By LLOYD LTHRBAS

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 20 (AP) — Rumania clamped her Polish frontier shut today amid rumors of the arrest of German plotters in this country and execution of Polish leaders across the border.

Although officials here would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was learned on high authority that Rumanian police arrested a group of German residents of Bucowina (Bucovina) province charged with ploting a rising when and if German troops in Poland reached the Rumanian frontier.

This source said the Germans planned — under the direction of Berlin quarters — to start the armed insurrection and join the Nazi troops. Arrival of Russian forces at the border instead of German foiled the alleged plot, the source said.

Bukowina was a part of pre-World war Austria.

The Rumanian commanding officer at the Cristeatic bridgehead opposite Zaleszczyki, Poland, told of reports from across the border that Russian troops were disarming all Polish soldiers and placing them in internment camps.

The report said "some Polish

Henry Ford Says only Makers of Munitions Want Neutrality Change

By DAVID J. WILKIE

Detroit Sept. 20 (AP) —Henry Ford, avowed opponent of war, said today he was opposed to "any tampering with the neutrality act," and that "only the makers of war munitions profit financially from the human misery entailed in warfare."

"The present neutrality act," Ford said in an interview, "was written by men who know what war means. It is fool proof if we change it one iota we take the first step toward getting this country into war — a war that will bring untold misery to millions of people and set us back thousands of years."

Suspects War Is Phony

Ford expressed some doubt as to the extent of the present warfare in Europe. "This war — if there is one,' he said, "is none of our business. However, I agree with what Senator William E. Borah said the other day regarding the situation on Europe's Western front." (Borah, Idaho Republican, was quoted Monday as saying that there was "something phoney' about the whole war.)

Continuing his comment on this nation's neutrality status, Ford said:

"Munitions Makers Want War"

"The sole purpose of amending the neutrality act is to enable munitions makers to profit financially through what is nothing less than mass murder. The only persons who want war are those who profit financially from it. And if we have to have a war to create and maintain a workable financial system there is something tragically wrong with our financial system. It is time then to turn back to Congress control of that system."

Ford said that in his belief "one way to stop the present war in a hurry is to leave the present neutrality act alone."

Ford has accepted an invitation to attend the Chicago convention of the American Legion this weekend, but said he had no plans for a lengthy address.

Thousands Swelter in California As Temperature Hangs Around 107

Los Angeles, Sept. 20 (AP)—In a radio fantasy recently, Joe E. Brown was told that unless he was a good boy he would not go to heaven.

"But I don't wanna go to heaven," retorted Joe. "I've lived in California too long."

After he gets through this dreadful hot spell—some fear they won't make it—Joe probably will want to revamp that quip.

Instead of getting better, the weather is getting—excuse this—more unusual.

The mercury went up to 107 degrees at noon. That's what the weather man said and he's going to put it in his records.

Thousands of working humans, who couldn't swim out into the Pacific to get under the shade of a battleship, knew it was much hotter than that—maybe 10 or 20 degrees.

Two thermometers, side by side in the sun on a roof top, disagreed. One went to 142, the other to 138.

The highest official southern California temperature today was at Monrovia. It was 110 there, but a sudden electrical storm, accompanied by rain and hail, dropped the temperature 25 degrees in five minutes.

In Long Beach, usually cooled by ocean breezes, it also was 107. Santa Barbara, on the coast, was 103.

Schools were dismissed in many cities for the duration of the desert weather wave, now in its fifth day. Some downtown stores closed at noon.

The number of known dead has been put officially at 17.

No Revolution in Bohemia or Moravia

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—A spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reichs protector for Bohemia and Moravia, tonight described as "nonsense" reports abroad of an organized revolt in the protectorate.

(The British ministry of information announced in London it had received authoritative reports that a revolutionary movement started last Sunday in Bohemia and Moravia, former Czecho-Slovak territory over which Germany has established a protectorate.)

Russians Take 60,000 Prisoners In Four Days of Drive in Poland

Moscow, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Soviet Russian high command reported tonight its troops driving through Poland had occupied Grodno, about 16 miles from the East Prussian border.

Grodno is 90 miles southwest of Wilno (Vilna), in northeast Poland near the Lithuanian border and 45 miles northeast of Bialystok, communications center reported occupied by German forces. A previous communique announced the capture of Wilno.

In southwest Poland the Soviet army reported the occupation of Kovel, Ukrainian town 100 miles north of Lwow, industrial center which the Red army command announced was occupied earlier in the day.

The Soviet high command announced that during the four days since the Red army marched into Poland more than 60,000 Polish troops had been taken prisoner.

"All armaments, artillery and ammunition" were said to have been taken with the occupation of the fortified areas of Wilno, Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny.

War materials seized by the Russians were reported to include 280 artillery guns and 120 airplanes.

While German and Russian officers met to thresh out problems growing out of their military occupation of Poland, the Soviet government was reported to have called up an undetermined number of reserves for its huge army already in service.

It was reported in an unofficial quarter that they were to be sent to some point beyond Lwo on the Western frontier in Poland.

The conferees on the Polish situation included four German officers who arrived yesterday to assist the German military attache in Moscow.

In diplomatic quarters it was learned that Rumania, in what appeared a move to strengthen her relations with the Soviets, had changed her ambassador to Moscow.

Typographical Union Facing Suspension

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor, it was learned tonight, has taken action which may result in suspension of one of its oldest affiliates, the International Typographical Union.

William Green, AFL president, said the ITU's last check for regular per capita taxes had been returned to the union, and that the Typographical organization would be "automatically suspended" if its delegates appeared at the AFL convention in Cincinnati next month unprepared to pay the special assessment arrearage.

The return of the check, Green said, was in accordance with an AFL executive council order after ITU's refusal to pay a special assessment levied in 1937 to provide a war chest to combat CIO organizing campaigns.

No Revolution in Bohemia or Moravia

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—A spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reichs protector for Bohemia and Moravia, tonight described as "nonsense" reports abroad of an organized revolt in the protectorate.

(The British ministry of information announced in London it had received authoritative reports that a revolutionary movement started last Sunday in Bohemia and Moravia, former Czecho-Slovak territory over which Germany has established a protectorate.)

Story Given Out in London Is Not Denied, but Details of Alleged Capture Are Entirely Lacking

London, Sept. 21.—(Thursday)—(AP)—The British Press Association said that according to reports prevalent today and not denied, Germany's crack liner Bremen had reached a British port under the escort of naval vessels.

The press association said "for some days various stories have circulated that the Bremen had been captured and was on her way to England. Though no official confirmation was forthcoming in London this morning the story of the liner's capture was not denied."

Mystery has surrounded the Bremen since she left New York Aug. 20.

Reports that the liner had reached a neutral port were never confirmed.

The Bremen sailed from New York on Aug 30, two days before Germany invaded Poland, and has not been definitely reported since.

Last Saturday the German ambassador to Russia, Count Friedrich von Der Schulenberg, intimated the $20,000,000 pride of the German merchant marine had been captured by Britain.

Referred to Churchill

He said questions concerning the ship should be referred to Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty.

"American authorities," he said, "were so kind as to hold up the Bremen for 22 hours and so far as I know the British have rather fast destroyers."

The Bremen sailed from New York without passengers after being held for lifeboat and other inspections.

On Sept. 12 the British ministry of information authorized publication of a several days old Rotterdam report that the Bremen had acquired status as an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port.

This was denied in Rome.

There were reports the vessel had gone to Iceland, but the Iceland telegraph agency denied these.

Not Seen in Russia

Next, on Sept. 14, information close to Germany's navy said the Bremen had arrived at Murmansk, Russia, after crossing the Atlantic by the most northern route.

On Sept. 16 German Air Minister Herrmann Wilhelm Goering in a speech to munitions workers made a vague reference to the Bremen by stating a British attempt to capture her had "misfired." He said no more.

There were various other reports that the Bremen was heading for a neutral port in Mexico or South America, or had been sunk. None of these was verified.

Rumania Closes Her Frontier to Polish Refugees

By LLOYD LTHRBAS

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 20 (AP) — Rumania clamped her Polish frontier shut today amid rumors of the arrest of German plotters in this country and execution of Polish leaders across the border.

Although officials here would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was learned on high authority that Rumanian police arrested a group of German residents of Bucowina (Bucovina) province charged with ploting a rising when and if German troops in Poland reached the Rumanian frontier.

This source said the Germans planned — under the direction of Berlin quarters — to start the armed insurrection and join the Nazi troops. Arrival of Russian forces at the border instead of German foiled the alleged plot, the source said.

Bukowina was a part of pre-World war Austria.

The Rumanian commanding officer at the Cristeatic bridgehead opposite Zaleszczyki, Poland, told of reports from across the border that Russian troops were disarming all Polish soldiers and placing them in internment camps.

The report said "some Polish

Russians Take 60,000 Prisoners In Four Days of Drive in Poland

Moscow, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Soviet Russian high command reported tonight its troops driving through Poland had occupied Grodno, about 16 miles from the East Prussian border.

Grodno is 90 miles southwest of Wilno (Vilna), in northeast Poland near the Lithuanian border and 45 miles northeast of Bialystok, communications center reported occupied by German forces. A previous communique announced the capture of Wilno.

In southwest Poland the Soviet army reported the occupation of Kovel, Ukrainian town 100 miles north of Lwow, industrial center which the Red army command announced was occupied earlier in the day.

The Soviet high command announced that during the four days since the Red army marched into Poland more than 60,000 Polish troops had been taken prisoner.

"All armaments, artillery and ammunition" were said to have been taken with the occupation of the fortified areas of Wilno, Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny.

War materials seized by the Russians were reported to include 280 artillery guns and 120 airplanes.

While German and Russian officers met to thresh out problems growing out of their military occupation of Poland, the Soviet government was reported to have called up an undetermined number of reserves for its huge army already in service.

It was reported in an unofficial quarter that they were to be sent to some point beyond Lwo on the Western frontier in Poland.

The conferees on the Polish situation included four German officers who arrived yesterday to assist the German military attache in Moscow.

In diplomatic quarters it was learned that Rumania, in what appeared a move to strengthen her relations with the Soviets, had changed her ambassador to Moscow.

Henry Ford Says only Makers of Munitions Want Neutrality Change

By DAVID J. WILKIE

Detroit Sept. 20 (AP) —Henry Ford, avowed opponent of war, said today he was opposed to "any tampering with the neutrality act," and that "only the makers of war munitions profit financially from the human misery entailed in warfare."

"The present neutrality act," Ford said in an interview, "was written by men who know what war means. It is fool proof if we change it one iota we take the first step toward getting this country into war — a war that will bring untold misery to millions of people and set us back thousands of years."

Suspects War Is Phony

Ford expressed some doubt as to the extent of the present warfare in Europe. "This war — if there is one,' he said, "is none of our business. However, I agree with what Senator William E. Borah said the other day regarding the situation on Europe's Western front." (Borah, Idaho Republican, was quoted Monday as saying that there was "something phoney' about the whole war.)

Continuing his comment on this nation's neutrality status, Ford said:

"Munitions Makers Want War"

"The sole purpose of amending the neutrality act is to enable munitions makers to profit financially through what is nothing less than mass murder. The only persons who want war are those who profit financially from it. And if we have to have a war to create and maintain a workable financial system there is something tragically wrong with our financial system. It is time then to turn back to Congress control of that system."

Ford said that in his belief "one way to stop the present war in a hurry is to leave the present neutrality act alone."

Ford has accepted an invitation to attend the Chicago convention of the American Legion this weekend, but said he had no plans for a lengthy address.

3,000 Poles Flee Into Hungary To Escape from Foes

Soldiers Arrive with Many Sick and Wounded Civilians

Nagy Bereszna, Hungary, Sept. 20. (AP)—More than 3,000 Polish infantrymen crossed the Uzsok pass, in the the Carpathian mountains on the southeastern Polish border, to reach safety in Hungary today.

The new arrivals swelled the number of Polish troops and civilians taking refuge in Hungary to nearly 20,000.

The infantry brought wagon trains bearing many sick and wounded. They were escorted by Hungarian soldiers to Ungvar, 30 miles from the border, where schools were converted into hospitals.

The line of civilians and military refugees trudged through bitter cold over the windy, 3,000 foot-high mountain pass, near the spot where Polish, Slovak and Hungarian borders meet.

It was through this ancient pass that Hungarians and Poles went to the aid of each other in times of stress during past centuries.

Trains Sent to Pass

Hungarian trains were sent to the pass and other border points to pick up the weary, footsore Poles.

Among the refugees was a group of children from three to 15 years old, insufficiently clad and suffering from the severe cold. They were brought here by Hungarian soldiers who wrapped them in their own uniform coats. All the children had been separated from their parents.

An epidemic of typhoid was reported to have broken out in Polish Galicia following destruction of sanitation and water supply systems by German air bombs.

Refugees Quarantined

Refugees arriving from many parts of Galicia were quarantined and special isolation hospitals were set up by Hungarian authorities in rural school buildings.

Late today a Polish train with 16 cars loaded with refugees arrived at Uzsok. The locomotive was piloted by a soldier who said the engineer and fireman had been machine-gunned by German armored cars which had sped along a road parallel to the train.

Many refugees were said to have been killed or wounded by the armored car fire, which threw the passengers into a panic. The armored cars were reported to have been chased away by Polish troops who halted in their flight to Hungary to repel the Germans.

Child Goes Insane

A twelve-year old girl was taken to a hospital by physicians who said she lost her reason when her parents were killed in a bombing raid.

A Polish captain who came here with his company yesterday committed suicide, officers said, when he was told by more recent arrivals that his wife had been killed in a bombing raid.

Polish officers and civilians estimated that "at least 20,000" civilians had been killed in air raids since the beginning of the war.

During the afternoon cannonading could be heard here and it was believed the Germans were attempting to cut off further retreat of Polish troops. Many Polish soldiers had thrown away their rifles before they reached the frontier in order to travel faster.

leaders" were executed. Many of the victims were learned to be Ukrainians who held responsible positions in the former Warsaw government. They therefore were shot as traitors, it was said.

Information in military circles declared Russia had sent 110 divisions of troops into Poland.

High Polish officials said they had received information that Generad Kozlowski, now leading the Polish defense of Lwow, may be chosen by the Russians and Germans to negotiate peace with their governments and to head a new Polish buffer state reported to have been agreed upon.

Before closing the frontier at Zaleszczyki, Rumanian authorities declared more than 60,000 Polish military and civilian refugees had arrived here since Sunday. They said negotiations would begin soon between the Rumanian, Russian and German governments.

No reason was given for the latest closing of the frontier.

A cordon also was thrown around Cernauti to forestal any refugees who might want to leave the city without permission.

The officer at the bridgehead said he understood a Soviet tank column had occupied Kuty, a border city 40 miles west of Cernauti.

Richard Mowrer, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, was brought here by friends who found him walking along a country road after escaping from the Russian-occupied section of Poland. He had waded across the Dniestr river during the night.

(Mowrer was reported Tuesday to have been arrested by Soviet soldiers at Zaleszczyki.)

French and German Aviators Clash Over Siegfried and Maginot Lines

One German Ship Reported Brought Down Behind French Front

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP) — French and German aviation clashed today in a series of battles for mastery of the air over the Siegfried and Maginot lines.

One German ship, a Messerschmidt fighter, was reported to have been shot down within French lines by French pursuit planes.

While German land forces were trying to feel their way forward behind a protective screen of artillery fire, Nazi planes roared into the air, apparently bent on the double mission of enticing the French into battle and strafing French advance positions.

German aircraft were reported to have taken the lead in an attack on the Northern flank of the Western front as a result of a new German air base established at Aachen, far north of the fighting front.

Tonight's general staff communique described the day's action as "activity of the enemy artillery at various points of the front. French and German pursuit planes fought several battles. An enemy plane was shot down within our lines."

France Seeks "Definite Victory"

The French government declared, meanwhile, that Europe's 17-day old war will be carried on until Nazi Germany is crushed by a "definite victory."

The statement, issued after the first French cabinet meeting since war was declared, was made in the face of the collapse of France's ally Poland, under the joint pressure of German and Soviet Russian armies.

It was considered an answer to Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech of yesterday, which was interpreted in Paris as a bid to France and Britain to give up Poland as lost and make peace.

No Peace Note

No peace note was sounded, however, as the German heavy guns pounded French positions tonight with increasingly steady rhythm.

Far to the north the Germans were reported concentrating troops at Aachen, which lies at the juncture of the German, Netherlands and Belgian frontiers. And the French high command was authoritatively understood to have taken measures to meet any possible repetition of Germany's 1914 drive through Belgium.

Reports said the German troops had been shifted to the Western front from Poland. French military sources intimated concern over the reported concentration since Koblenz, not Aachen, is the logical concentration point for troops moving from northeast Germany to the Western front.

Military observers regarded as significant, too, the fact that from Koblenz the main railroad lines run behind the Siegfried line while from Aachen there is no main line south to the fighting zone. Railroads from Aachen run into Holland and Belgium.

Germans Clear War Area

Reports have been reaching Paris for some days that the Germans had cleared this area of inhabitants as far back as Koblenz, despite the fact that under present operations it is in no apparent danger of immediate attack.

A curtain of artillery fire on the Western front shielded Nazi infantry which scoured the wooded hills which mark the sector east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken.

The Germans, who have been sending out patrols in this area for the last three days, were reported now to be using units as large as companies in their advance guard actions.

The French admitted they had lost one advanced position yesterday in the face of a German surprise attack. The Germans, however, apparently were interested only in taking prisoners in order to question them.

A French counter-attack led by tanks was reported to have had little difficulty in retaking the post a few hours later.

O'Conor Praises Maryland Potatoes

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20 (AP)—Governor Herbert R. O'Conor said today he was sorry, but Maryland oysters were so good just now he can't go to the Maine-Idaho gubernatorial potato picking contest.

Anyway, said O'Conor, Maryland potatoes are just as good as those in Maine and Idaho.

Governor C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho invited O'Conor to come watch him pick potatoes against Governor Lewis O. Barrows of Maine at Blackfoot, Idaho, Sept. 22. The Idaho governor said he and Barrows would wear overalls and the festivities needed a few top hats to give it dignity.

If O'Conor didn't want to wear a top hat, he added, Idaho would fit him out in an Indian costume.

O'Conor replied that it was fitting and proper the other governors should invite to their contest the governor of Maryland, "the one other state in the country whose potatoes equal in quality—in due modesty, I hesitate to say any more—the potatoes of Maine and Idaho."

He backed up the free state's claim by saying soil research showed Maryland dirt was as good for potatoes as Maine and Idaho dirt.

The Maryland governor added a bit of advice to Bottolfsen, telling him he ought to train on Maryland oysters, "brimful of vitamins and so tasty the only difficulty is you may find it hard to vary your diet. Once you experience the delights of Maryland oysters, you will want them for breakfast, lunch and dinner."

Three, while Hitler emphasized "humane methods by which he has waged war," methods "are not made humane by calling them so" and "accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

Four, Britain's general war purpose is "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties" and "no threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

Five, if Britain and France have been unable to "avert the defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

Six, a white paper tomorrow "will make plain the true course of events" in contrast to what Chamberlain described as "many misstatements of fact" by Hitler.

Seven, Britain which in the last war was "on the defensive against the U-boat campaign" is now "carrying out an offensive against German submarines" and "already six or seven German submarines have paid the full penalty for their attacks on British shipping."

Lifting slightly the curtain on Britain's war strategy, Chamberlain said "strategy is the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment."

When or where the decisive force would be assembled he would not hazard a guess, but he declared "the scale of our preparations insures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come."

The whole British commonwealth, he said, was fast mobilizing forces "stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war."

After leaving Parliament Chamberlain went to see the King.

Germans Praise French Lieutenant Killed in Action

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—The German army buried Louis Paul Deschanel, son of a former president of the French republic, with impressive ceremonies yesterday at Ottweiler, in the Saar region.

A lieutenant in the French army, 30 years old, Deschanel was killed while leading a patrol near Germany's Siegfried line. His companions, under fire, were unable to take the body back to French positions.

The Germans chose the most attractive spot in the Naumuenster cemetery for Deschanel's grave.

An honor company fired a military farewell.

The funeral was made another occasion for emphasis on Germany's oft-repeated protestation that it feels no animosity toward France and wants no war in the west.

A Nazi party leader in a short address said:

"From this grave we call out over the frontier:

"Why should blood flow without reason? We wish peace but we shall, if the unhappy necessity should arise, also do our duty to the last."

man side. Poles also still were fighting in and south of the fortified town of Modlin, immediately north of Warsaw.

Germans regarded the attitude of the Warsaw population, which doggedly refused to surrender, as "sheer folly, having nothing to do with heroism" in view of the fact that the Polish army has been routed and can not aid the city.

The German army has announced resumption of large-scale hostilities against Warsaw, following a halt when the population was given a chance to capitulate and get out, but it was apparent the Nazis still were holding off from heavily shelling the city.

The army was represented as clinging to the hope that surrender would come without a great deal more destruction and additional misery to the hundreds of thousands remaining in the besieged capital.

Authoritative sources said the release of civilian prisoners had started and that war prisoners were being sorted and put into camps where they will be used on farms and roads.

The Nazi slogan was "Germany's war aims are fulfilled" as the government assumed the task of reconstruction in Poland and settling spheres of influence with Russia.

But the Western Front was not forgotten although war communiques so far have dealt with action there in one or two sentences.

The situation in the east was so well in hand that Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch was reported to have left Poland yesterday and to have assumed personal direction of Nazi forces on the Western front.

Adolf Hitler remained at Danzig for a few days and was expected to visit the Western Front shortly.

Nazi troops were known to be moving from Poland westward, leaving behind only enough strength to finish the cleaning up process and man garrisons.

Informed German quarters pointed out with satisfaction that the German-Soviet accord had contradicted "hopes abroad that strong German forces would be mired in Poland's eastern swamp lands where there is no German minority, this diminishing Nazi fighting strength in the west."

Russia is relieving Germany of the job of patrolling this region, inhabited chiefly by Ukrainians and White Russians, the Germans said.

The decision of Scandinavian neutrals meeting in Copenhagen to defend their neutral rights against what the Germans called "encroachments upon their foreign trade brought about by the blockade of Germany met full agreement in Berlin.

Official quarters meanwhile awaited the session of the United States Congress opening tomorrow to debate the United States' position as a neutral.

Newspapers withheld comment on the eve of the Congressional meeting but it previously was stated Germany would be forced to take defense measures if the American arms embargo was lifted in a manner favoring Britain and France exclusively.

The high command communique for the first time today gave a clear picture of the enormity of the battle in the bend of the Vistula. It said the fighting covered 969 square miles and was waged from Sept. 10 to Sept. 19.

The Germans were reported authoritatively to have taken a total of 420,000 Polish prisoners up to today. More than 100,000 of these were said to have been caught in the egg-shaped area 50 miles long and 15 to 30 miles wide north of Lodz in the vicinities of Kitno, Leczyca, Ozorkow, Lowicz, Sochaczew and Syszogrod.

Army sources said the fighting around Ozorkow would go down as one of the greatest in German history. The victory was being compared with that of Germany at Tannenberg over the Russians in 1914. The Germans took 92,000 prisoners in that battle.

Army sources said clothing for Polish war prisoners was a problem as 90 percent were without overcoats, 30 percent had no military blouses and 10 percent lacked shoes. They are to be clothed from war booty and whatever apparel Polish factories can turn out.

Joe Louis Named Round He'd Beat Young Challenger

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Briggs Stadium, Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Joe Louis named the round in which he finished his game foe, Bob Pastor.

At the end of the tenth round when Louis trotted back to his corner he confided to trainer Jack Blackburn that "this next round is the one where I'm going to get him."

The world's heavyweight champion, shuffling into his dressing room, was shunted into a wire cage usually occupied by Del Baker, manager of the Detroit Tigers, as his own private dressing room. He was laid out by tender hands as if he were a piece of bric-a-brac.

Blackburn unlaced his shoes and another attendant cut off the gloves, which he promptly tossed to two Detroit fans.

Louis said that he never felt any of the blows that Pastor threw at him except one in the eighth—a right hand punch to the head.

All this time "Chappie" Blackburn was tenderly patting Louis's face. There was a 'mouse" under Joe's left eye and Blackburn was greatly concerned over it.

Joe explained that he didn't chase Pastor much because he realized his rival was game and didn't want to take any chances of breaking a hand.

The champion praised Pastor's courage, declaring that outside of Primo Carnera he recovered more quickly from a blow than any fighter he ever had met.

"He gets over them punches just like that," said Louis, snapping his fingers.

Told that it was a right cross to the chin that finished the challenger, Louis blinked and asked, "was it? I don't know myself."

Pastor and his manager, James J. Johnston, had scarcely reached the dressing room before both clamored for another shot at Louis.

"I guess my eye was filled with blood and I didn't even see that right hand punch coming," he said. "The next thing I knew the referee was counting nine. I just couldn't get up. Anyhow, I gave them a good show."

Bob Puts Up Fine Fight but Champ Wears Him Down

said he "didn't see the punch coming."

"My eye was full of blood," he explained, "and I was blinded. The punch paralyzed me and I didn't know anything until I heard the referee count nine."

Not Much "Bicycling"

Bob climbed on his "bicycle" again this time, just as he backpedalled in his first fight with Louis in '37, but tonight he came forward time after time to throw short lefts to the face and to land once or twice with a right hand.

With this bout past, Louis looks forward to a return match with Tony Galento, who gave him a lot of trouble for three rounds last June. This fight is scheduled for next summer. Promoter Mike Jacobs indicated he may give Pastor another crack at the champion, after Bob fights once or twice more, and immediately Jimmy Johnston, Pastor's manager, asked for Galento.

At the start tonight it didn't appear that Pastor was going to last any longer with Louis than did Schmeling, Lewis and Jack Roper, all of whom were put away in less than a round.

Louis came out swinging and belted Bob to the floor with a right near his own corner. Pastor was up with no count, and promptly went down again from a couple more of those terrific right hand bombs. This time he took a nine-count before climbing up but it was only to go down once more, for a count of seven. He weather the storm for a few moment after that, but was dropped to one knee just at the bell.

Down for Fifth Time

A right hand chopped him down for the fifth time as they belted through the second round. Then he trotted out his bicycle and started to back away, boxing beautifully, feinting and circling the champion out of position.

In the fourth, with Louis trailing him like a panther and seeming to be waiting an opening for a right hand shot, Pastor made his first bid. He danced forward and connected with three lefts and a right.

Late in the fifth round Pastor's mouthpiece fell to the canvas, and just before the bell Louis drew blood from inside his unprotected lips with two rights. Again in the sixth Pastor's knees buckled as that right hand cannon fired its shells.

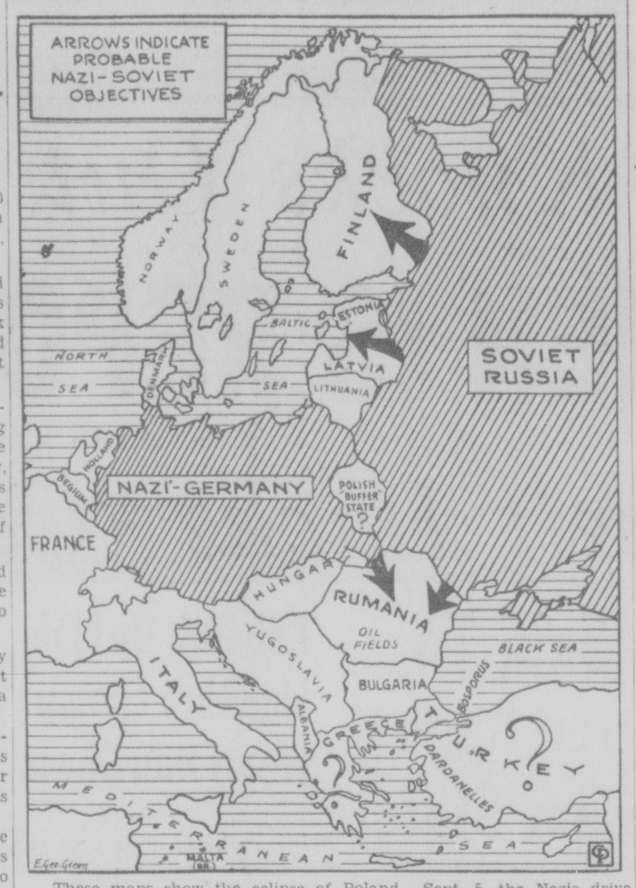
Blood dripped from the cut over Bob's eye, from his nose and from his mouth as Louis moved in, punching in the seventh, but Pastor started to come back then.

He took the fight to the champion in the eighth, backed him against the ropes and forced him to cover up, befuddled as he tossed both hands to the jaw. He might have floored Joe then, but he was too tired to keep after him. Still he kept up his advance in the ninth and tenth and did not appear too worn out.

Then came the 11th—and the end. Pastor zigged when he should have zagged.

Some reason for Joe's lapses into sluggishness might have come from the weather. It was far more suited for football, as an early evening breeze from the west dropped the thermometer down below the 60-degree mark.

POLISH ECLIPSE BY MARS



These maps show the eclipse of Poland. Sept. 5, the Nazis drive west and south from East Prussia, east from Germany and Silesia. Sept. 14, they reach the Vistula. Warsaw is all but surrounded, but Gdynia holds out in far north. Sept. 16, Gdynia surrenders, Warsaw is surrounded and Nazis are east to the Brest-Litovsk-Lwow line. Finally, Russia comes in, and heavy center line (lower right) indicates German-Russian partition of Poland. Warsaw still stands as does a narrow wedge between Nazi and Red conquests.

Prowlers of the Undersea Are Courteous to Innocent Victims

Americans Praise Germans Who Stopped Them at Sea

BY ED WALLACE

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Prowlers of the undersea, while intent on destruction of belligerent nations' vessels and contraband aboard those of neutrals, are pursuing a "war of politeness" toward innocent victims.

Americans returning from Europe told today of a submarine's shell screaming across the bow of the United States Freighter Wacosta, followed by polite apologies by the U-boats commander.

One of the Wacosta's passengers was Prof. Charles Wharton Stork of Harcum Junior College at Bryn Mawr, Pa., a survivor of the sinking of the Athenia. He acted as interpreter between the master of the Wacosta and the submarine's boarding officer.

Halted Off Irish Coast

Off the Irish coast, the freighter was halted by a shot across her bow on Sept 9. She carried 14,000 cases of Scotch whisky from Glasgow.

"When I saw the submarine, I thought I was going to get sunk again—and I didn't like the idea," Stork said.

"The second mate called my attention to the sub about a mile off the starboard side," Capt. George R. Sels of Mobile, Ala., explained. "The sub gave some sort of flag signal. I couldn't understand it. Then she fired one shot across our bow about 75 feet ahead.

"I hove to and the sub stopped about a quarter of a mile away. The sub signaled for a boat, and the third officer, M. C. Smith, went over with some members of the crew. He was asked if he had the ship's papers. He said 'no,' so the sub sent over an officer and four men."

The officer asked—in English—for an interpreter. Stork, who had studied at the University of Munich, stepped forward.

Germans Search Ship

Expressing displeasure at the captain's failure to halt, the U-boat officer warned the captain to heave to the next time he sighted a submarine, then with his men went below deck and searched the ship.

"He was extremely courteous, cultured, polished, a society gentleman," Stork said of the submarine officer.

His three-quarter-hour search completed, the officer and men emerged from the hold. In a quiet voice, he made a short speech to the 24 passengers.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he explained, "I regret having detained you, but this is war. We did not wish war with England, but we were forced into it. What would you think if somebody took a piece of your southern coast? You wouldn't like it."

Then with a bow from the waist, he said, "goodbye," shook hands with Stork, and asked, "we're not so barbarous, are we, except that I do need a shave? I'll see you at a tea dance in New York."

Then over the side, he and his men disappeared.

One Wacosta passenger, Mrs. H. E. Jones of Mobile, tried to photograph the German sailors, but stopped when they slapped their holstered pistols and shouted at her in German.

"Oh, boy, were they handsome!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones.

and Denmark despite the danger of mines, hurried to port and added their accounts of the sounds of firing.

Hearers agreed that at least 200 shots were given or exchanged and they thought the sounds were cannon fire and not bombs.

The fact that the shots were heard along the whole of a 70-mile streatch of coast indicated that if it was a battle it was a terrific one.

Senator Radcliffe Favors Change in Neutrality Polic

Tydings Silent on Views as He Leaves for Washington

Baltimore, Sept. 20. (AP)—Senator George L. Radcliffe (D-Md) formally aligned himself today with congressional forces seeking revision of the neutrality act at the special session opening tomorrow.

At the same time the junior senator emphasized he preferred to "keep an open mind" on details of the program he would support pending presentation by President Roosevelt of the administration program for a new neutrality statute.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, at his Harford home today pending departure for Washington, delayed statement of his stand on the question.

Radcliffe said his aim was an act which would effectively keep the United States out of the European war. The existing law, he contended, is inadequate for that purpose and potentially harmful to the country's interests.

"We ought to see what the President proposes," he explained. "It is my opinion, though, that some sort of cash-and-carry requirement would be the proper step. That would accomplish a reasonable regulation of all trade with warring nations. It would serve to keep us out of entanglements and provocations that might lead to war. . . .

"I expect to go to Washington with an open mind to hear what is proposed and measure it against what I believe to be the needs in keeping us out of war. That is the vital thing—peace for America."

Radcliffe described the present neutrality act as "lop-sided and totally inadequate."

"Tuxedo Bandit" Refused Pardon

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (AP) —The Baltimore "Tuxedo bandit," who wore dinner clothes during a $200 drug store holdup, was refused a pardon today although he asked it so he could study at a Chicago Bible Institute.

Parole Director Herman M. Moser said pardons should be restricted to men whose innocence has been proven after conviction and that he declined to recommend executive clemency to Frank Wooten because he had been guilty of a prior violation.

Wooten, sentenced in 1927 to 4 years in the penitentiary, was paroled in 1935 and returned to prison the following year for parole violation, Moser said. He added that Wooten had made three attempts to obtain his freedom through writs of habeas corpus. All were refused.

Wooten claimed that he was convicted on three charges of holdup because there were three persons in the drugstore. He contended he was guilty of only one holdup, although there were three victims.

Wooten and a companion were convicted of entering an East Baltimore drug store and escaping a few minutes after the holdup Wooten, still in dinner jacket, approached police at the drugstore and gave himself up, saying his conscience was bothering him.

3,000 Poles Flee Into Hungary To Escape from Foes

Soldiers Arrive with Many Sick and Wounded Civilians

Nagy Bereszna, Hungary, Sept. 20. (AP)—More than 3,000 Polish infantrymen crossed the Uzsok pass, in the the Carpathian mountains on the southeastern Polish border, to reach safety in Hungary today.

The new arrivals swelled the number of Polish troops and civilians taking refuge in Hungary to nearly 20,000.

The infantry brought wagon trains bearing many sick and wounded. They were escorted by Hungarian soldiers to Ungvar, 30 miles from the border, where schools were converted into hospitals.

The line of civilians and military refugees trudged through bitter cold over the windy, 3,000 foot-high mountain pass, near the spot where Polish, Slovak and Hungarian borders meet.

It was through this ancient pass that Hungarians and Poles went to the aid of each other in times of stress during past centuries.

Trains Sent to Pass

Hungarian trains were sent to the pass and other border points to pick up the weary, footsore Poles.

Among the refugees was a group of children from three to 15 years old, insufficiently clad and suffering from the severe cold. They were brought here by Hungarian soldiers who wrapped them in their own uniform coats. All the children had been separated from their parents.

An epidemic of typhoid was reported to have broken out in Polish Galicia following destruction of sanitation and water supply systems by German air bombs.

Refugees Quarantined

Refugees arriving from many parts of Galicia were quarantined and special isolation hospitals were set up by Hungarian authorities in rural school buildings.

Late today a Polish train with 16 cars loaded with refugees arrived at Uzsok. The locomotive was piloted by a soldier who said the engineer and fireman had been machine-gunned by German armored cars which had sped along a road parallel to the train.

Many refugees were said to have been killed or wounded by the armored car fire, which threw the passengers into a panic. The armored cars were reported to have been chased away by Polish troops who halted in their flight to Hungary to repel the Germans.

Child Goes Insane

A twelve-year old girl was taken to a hospital by physicians who said she lost her reason when her parents were killed in a bombing raid.

A Polish captain who came here with his company yesterday committed suicide, officers said, when he was told by more recent arrivals that his wife had been killed in a bombing raid.

Polish officers and civilians estimated that "at least 20,000" civilians had been killed in air raids since the beginning of the war.

During the afternoon cannonading could be heard here and it was believed the Germans were attempting to cut off further retreat of Polish troops. Many Polish soldiers had thrown away their rifles before they reached the frontier in order to travel faster.

leaders" were executed. Many of the victims were learned to be Ukrainians who held responsible positions in the former Warsaw government. They therefore were shot as traitors, it was said.

Information in military circles declared Russia had sent 110 divisions of troops into Poland.

High Polish officials said they had received information that Genrad Kozlowski, now leading the Polish defense of Lwow, may be chosen by the Russians and Germans to negotiate peace with their governments and to head a new Polish buffer state reported to have been agreed upon.

Before closing the frontier at Zaleszczyki, Rumanian authorities declared more than 60,000 Polish military and civilian refugees had arrived here since Sunday. They said negotiations would begin soon between the Rumanian, Russian and German governments.

No reason was given for the latest closing of the frontier.

A cordon also was thrown around Cernauti to forestal any refugees who might want to leave the city without permission.

The officer at the bridgehead said he understood a Soviet tank column had occupied Kuty, a border city 40 miles west of Cernauti.

Richard Mowrer, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, was brought here by friends who found him walking along a country road after escaping from the Russian-occupied section of Poland. He had waded across the Dniestr river during the night.

(Mowrer was reported Tuesday to have been arrested by Soviet soldiers at Zaleszczyki.)

French and German Aviators Clash Over Siegfried and Maginot Lines

One German Ship Reported Brought Down Behind French Front

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP) — French and German aviation clashed today in a series of battles for mastery of the air over the Siegfried and Maginot lines.

One German ship, a Messerschmidt fighter, was reported to have been shot down within French lines by French pursuit planes.

While German land forces were trying to feel their way forward behind a protective screen of artillery fire, Nazi planes roared into the air, apparently bent on the double mission of enticing the French into battle and strafing French advance positions.

German aircraft were reported to have taken the lead in an attack on the Northern flank of the Western front as a result of a new German air base established at Aachen, far north of the fighting front.

Tonight's general staff communique described the day's action as "activity of the enemy artillery at various points of the front. French and German pursuit planes fought several battles. An enemy plane was shot down within our lines."

France Seeks "Definite Victory"

The French government declared, meanwhile, that Europe's 17-day old war will be carried on until Nazi Germany is crushed by a "definite victory."

The statement, issued after the first French cabinet meeting since war was declared, was made in the face of the collapse of France's ally Poland, under the joint pressure of German and Soviet Russian armies.

It was considered an answer to Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech of yesterday, which was interpreted in Paris as a bid to France and Britain to give up Poland as lost and make peace.

No Peace Note

No peace note was sounded, however, as the German heavy guns pounded French positions tonight with increasingly steady rhythm.

Far to the north the Germans were reported concentrating troops at Aachen, which lies at the juncture of the German, Netherlands and Belgian frontiers. And the French high command was authoritatively understood to have taken measures to meet any possible repetition of Germany's 1914 drive through Belgium.

Reports said the German troops had been shifted to the Western front from Poland. French military sources intimated concern over the reported concentration since Koblenz, not Aachen, is the logical concentration point for troops moving from northeast Germany to the Western front.

Military observers regarded as significant, too, the fact that from Koblenz the main railroad lines run behind the Siegfried line while from Aachen there is no main line south to the fighting zone. Railroads from Aachen run into Holland and Belgium.

Germans Clear War Area

Reports have been reaching Paris for some days that the Germans had cleared this area of inhabitants as far back as Koblenz, despite the fact that under present operations it is in no apparent danger of immediate attack.

A curtain of artillery fire on the Western front shielded Nazi infantry which scoured the wooded hills which mark the sector east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken.

The Germans, who have been sending out patrols in this area for the last three days, were reported now to be using units as large as companies in their advance guard actions.

The French admitted they had lost one advanced position yesterday in the face of a German surprise attack. The Germans, however, apparently were interested only in taking prisoners in order to question them.

A French counter-attack led by tanks was reported to have had little difficulty in retaking the post a few hours later.

O'Conor Praises Maryland Potatoes

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 20 (AP)—Governor Herbert R. O'Conor said today he was sorry, but Maryland oysters were so good just now he can't go to the Maine-Idaho gubernatorial potato picking contest.

Anyway, said O'Conor, Maryland potatoes are just as good as those in Maine and Idaho.

Governor C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho invited O'Conor to come watch him pick potatoes against Governor Lewis O. Barrows of Maine at Blackfoot, Idaho, Sept. 22. The Idaho governor said he and Barrows would wear overalls and the festivities needed a few top hats to give it dignity.

If O'Conor didn't want to wear a top hat, he added, Idaho would fit him out in an Indian costume.

O'Conor replied that it was fitting and proper the other governors should invite to their contest the governor of Maryland, "the one other state in the country whose potatoes equal in quality—in due modesty, I hesitate to say any more—the potatoes of Maine and Idaho."

He backed up the free state's claim by saying soil research showed Maryland dirt was as good for potatoes as Maine and Idaho dirt.

The Maryland governor added a bit of advice to Bottolfsen, telling him he ought to train on Maryland oysters, "brimful of vitamins and so tasty the only difficulty is you may find it hard to vary your diet. Once you experience the delights of Maryland oysters, you will want them for breakfast, lunch and dinner."

Chamberlain Says Britain Will Save Europe From Nazis

Three, while Hitler emphasized "humane methods by which he has waged war," methods "are not made humane by calling them so" and "accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

Four, Britain's general war purpose is "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties" and "no threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

Five, if Britain and France have been unable to "avert the defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

Six, a white paper tomorrow "will make plain the true course of events" in contrast to what Chamberlain described as "many misstatements of fact" by Hitler.

Seven, Britain which in the last war was "on the defensive against the U-boat campaign" is now "carrying out an offensive against German submarines" and "already six or seven German submarines have paid the full penalty for their attacks on British shipping."

Lifting slightly the curtain on Britain's war strategy, Chamberlain said "strategy is the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment."

When or where the decisive force would be assembled he would not hazard a guess, but he declared "the scale of our preparations insures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come."

The whole British commonwealth, he said, was fast mobilizing forces "stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war."

After leaving Parliament Chamberlain went to see the King.

Germans Praise French Lieutenant Killed in Action

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—The German army buried Louis Paul Deschanel, son of a former president of the French republic, with impressive ceremonies yesterday at Ottweiler, in the Saar region.

A lieutenant in the French army, 30 years old, Deschanel was killed while leading a patrol near Germany's Siegfried line. His companions, under fire, were unable to take the body back to French positions.

The Germans chose the most attractive spot in the Naumuenster cemetery for Deschanel's grave.

An honor company fired a military farewell.

The funeral was made another occasion for emphasis on Germany's oft-repeated protestation that it feels no animosity toward France and wants no war in the west.

A Nazi party leader in a short address said:

"From this grave we call out over the frontier:

"Why should blood flow without reason? We wish peace but we shall, if the unhappy necessity should arise, also do our duty to the last."

man side. Poles also still were fighting in and south of the fortified town of Modlin, immediately north of Warsaw.

Germans regarded the attitude of the Warsaw population, which doggedly refused to surrender, as "sheer folly, having nothing to do with heroism" in view of the fact that the Polish army has been routed and can not aid the city.

The German army has announced resumption of large-scale hostilities against Warsaw, following a halt when the population was given a chance to capitulate and get out, but it was apparent the Nazis still were holding off from heavily shelling the city.

The army was represented as clinging to the hope that surrender would come without a great deal more destruction and additional misery to the hundreds of thousands remaining in the besieged capital.

Authoritative sources said the release of civilian prisoners had started and that war prisoners were being sorted and put into camps where they will be used on farms and roads.

The Nazi slogan was "Germany's war aims are fulfilled" as the government assumed the task of reconstruction in Poland and settling spheres of influence with Russia.

But the Western Front was not forgotten although war communiques so far have dealt with action there in one or two sentences.

The situation in the east was so well in hand that Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch was reported to have left Poland yesterday and to have assumed personal direction of Nazi forces on the Western front.

Adolf Hitler remained at Danzig for a few days and was expected to visit the Western Front shortly.

Nazi troops were known to be moving from Poland westward, leaving behind only enough strength to finish the cleaning up process and man garrisons.

Informed German quarters pointed out with satisfaction that the German-Soviet accord had contradicted "hopes abroad that strong German forces would be mired in Poland's eastern swamp lands where there is no German minority, this diminishing Nazi fighting strength in the west."

Russia is relieving Germany of the job of patrolling this region, inhabited chiefly by Ukrainians and White Russians, the Germans said.

The decision of Scandinavian neutrals meeting in Copenhagen to defend their neutral rights against what the Germans called "encroachments upon their foreign trade brought about by the blockade of Germany met full agreement in Berlin.

Official quarters meanwhile awaited the session of the United States Congress opening tomorrow to debate the United States' position as a neutral.

Newspapers withheld comment on the eve of the Congressional meeting but it previously was stated Germany would be forced to take defense measures if the American arms embargo was lifted in a manner favoring Britain and France exclusively.

The high command communique for the first time today gave a clear picture of the enormity of the battle in the bend of the Vistula. It said the fighting covered 969 square miles and was waged from Sept. 10 to Sept. 19.

The Germans were reported authoritatively to have taken a total of 420,000 Polish prisoners up to today. More than 100,000 of these were said to have been caught in the egg-shaped area 50 miles long and 15 to 30 miles wide north of Lodz in the vicinities of Kitno, Leczyca, Ozorkow, Lowicz, Sochaczew and Syszogrod.

Army sources said the fighting around Ozorkow would go down as one of the greatest in German history. The victory was being compared with that of Germany at Tannenberg over the Russians in 1914. The Germans took 92,000 prisoners in that battle.

Army sources said clothing for Polish war prisoners was a problem as 90 percent were without overcoats, 30 percent had no military blouses and 10 percent lacked shoes. They are to be clothed from war booty and whatever apparel Polish factories can turn out.

Joe Louis Named Round He'd Beat Young Challenger

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Briggs Stadium, Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Joe Louis named the round in which he finished his game foe, Bob Pastor.

At the end of the tenth round when Louis trotted back to his corner he confided to trainer Jack Blackburn that "this next round is the one where I'm going to get him."

The world's heavyweight champion, shuffling into his dressing room, was shunted into a wire cage usually occupied by Del Baker, manager of the Detroit Tigers, as his own private dressing room. He was laid out by tender hands as if he were a piece of bric-a-brac.

Blackburn unlaced his shoes and another attendant cut off the gloves, which he promptly tossed to two Detroit fans.

Louis said that he never felt any of the blows that Pastor threw at him except one in the eighth—a right hand punch to the head.

All this time "Chappie" Blackburn was tenderly patting Louis's face. There was a 'mouse" under Joe's left eye and Blackburn was greatly concerned over it.

Joe explained that he didn't chase Pastor much because he realized his rival was game and didn't want to take any chances of breaking a hand.

The champion praised Pastor's courage, declaring that outside of Primo Carnera he recovered more quickly from a blow than any fighter he ever had met.

"He gets over them punches just like that," said Louis, snapping his fingers.

Told that it was a right cross to the chin that finished the challenger, Louis blinked and asked, "was it? I don't know myself."

Pastor and his manager, James J. Johnston, had scarcely reached the dressing room before both clamored for another shot at Louis.

"I guess my eye was filled with blood and I didn't even see that right hand punch coming," he said. "The next thing I knew the referee was counting nine. I just couldn't get up. Anyhow, I gave them a good show."

Bob Puts Up Fine Fight but Champ Wears Him Down

said he "didn't see the punch coming."

"My eye was full of blood," he explained, "and I was blinded. The punch paralyzed me and I didn't know anything until I heard the referee count nine."

Not Much "Bicycling"

Bob climbed on his "bicycle" again this time, just as he backpedalled in his first fight with Louis in '37, but tonight he came forward time after time to throw short lefts to the face and to land once or twice with a right hand.

With this bout past, Louis looks forward to a return match with Tony Galento, who gave him a lot of trouble for three rounds last June. This fight is scheduled for next summer. Promoter Mike Jacobs indicated he may give Pastor another crack at the champion, after Bob fights once or twice more, and immediately Jimmy Johnston, Pastor's manager, asked for Galento.

At the start tonight it didn't appear that Pastor was going to last any longer with Louis than did Schmeling, Lewis and Jack Roper, all of whom were put away in less than a round.

Louis came out swinging and belted Bob to the floor with a right near his own corner. Pastor was up with no count, and promptly went down again from a couple more of those terrific right hand bombs. This time he took a nine-count before climbing up but it was only to go down once more, for a count of seven. He weather the storm for a few moment after that, but was dropped to one knee just at the bell.

Down for Fifth Time

A right hand chopped him down for the fifth time as they belted through the second round. Then he trotted out his bicycle and started to back away, boxing beautifully, feinting and circling the champion out of position.

In the fourth, with Louis trailing him like a panther and seeming to be waiting an opening for a right hand shot, Pastor made his first bid. He danced forward and connected with three lefts and a right.

Late in the fifth round Pastor's mouthpiece fell to the canvas, and just before the bell Louis drew blood from inside his unprotected lips with two rights. Again in the sixth Pastor's knees buckled as that right hand cannon fired its shells.

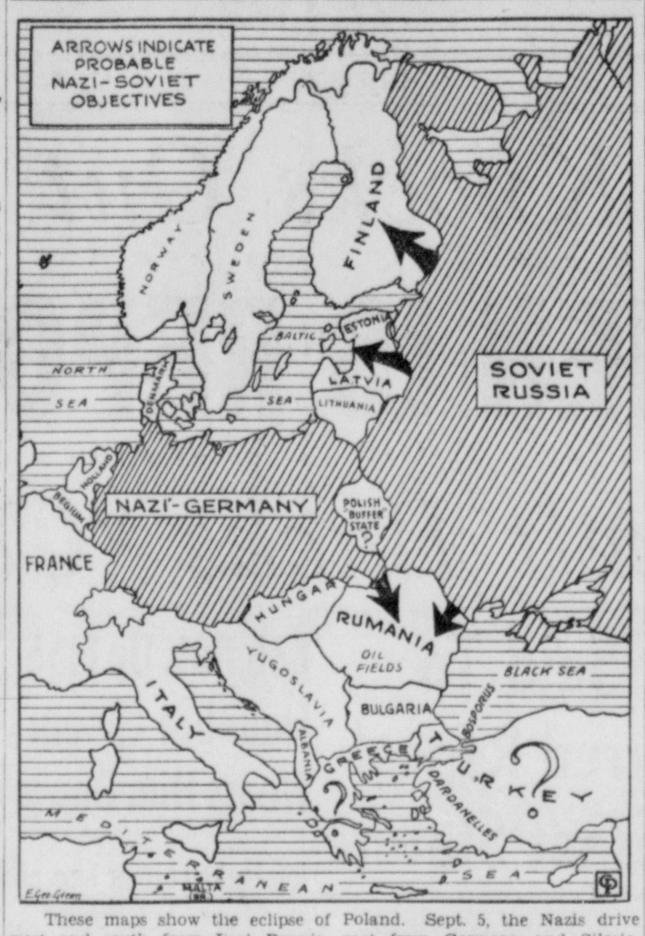
Blood dripped from the cut over Bob's eye, from his nose and from his mouth as Louis moved in, punching in the seventh, but Pastor started to come back then.

He took the fight to the champion in the eighth, backed him against the ropes and forced him to cover up, befuddled as he tossed both hands to the jaw. He might have floored Joe then, but he was too tired to keep after him. Still he kept up his advance in the ninth and tenth and did not appear too worn out.

Then came the 11th—and the end. Pastor zigged when he should have zagged.

Some reason for Joe's lapses into sluggishness might have come from the weather. It was far more suited for football, as an early evening breeze from the west dropped the thermometer down below the 60-degree mark.

POLISH ECLIPSE BY MARS



These maps show the eclipse of Poland. Sept. 5, the Nazis drive west and south from East Prussia, east from Germany and Silesia. Sept. 14, they reach the Vistula. Warsaw is all but surrounded, but Gdynia holds out in far north. Sept. 16, Gdynia surrenders, Warsaw is surrounded and Nazis are east to the Brest-Litovsk-Lwow line. Finally, Russia comes in, and heavy center line (lower right) indicates German-Russian partition of Poland. Warsaw still stands as does a narrow wedge between Nazi and Red conquests.

Prowlers of the Undersea Are Courteous to Innocent Victims

BY ED WALLACE

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Prowlers of the undersea, while intent on destruction of belligerent nations' vessels and contraband aboard those of neutrals, are pursuing a "war of politeness" toward innocent victims.

Americans returning from Europe told today of a submarine's shell screaming across the bow of the United States Freighter Wacosta, followed by polite apologies by the U-boats commander.

One of the Wacosta's passengers was Prof. Charles Wharton Stork of Harcum Junior College at Bryn Mawr, Pa., a survivor of the sinking of the Athenia. He acted as interpreter between the master of the Wacosta and the submarine's boarding officer.

Halted Off Irish Coast

Off the Irish coast, the freighter was halted by a shot across her bow on Sept 9. She carried 14,000 cases of Scotch whisky from Glasgow.

"When I saw the submarine, I thought I was going to get sunk again—and I didn't like the idea," Stork said.

"The second mate called my attention to the sub about a mile off the starboard side," Capt. George R. Sels of Mobile, Ala., explained. "The sub gave some sort of flag signal. I couldn't understand it. Then she fired one shot across our bow about 75 feet ahead.

"I hove to and the sub stopped about a quarter of a mile away. The sub signaled for a boat, and the third officer, M. C. Smith, went over with some members of the crew. He was asked if he had the ship's papers. He said 'no,' so the sub sent over an officer and four men."

The officer asked—in English—for an interpreter. Stork, who had studied at the University of Munich, stepped forward.

Germans Search Ship

Expressing displeasure at the captain's failure to halt, the U-boat officer warned the captain to heave to the next time he sighted a submarine, then with his men went below deck and searched the ship.

"He was extremely courteous, cultured, polished, a society gentleman," Stork said of the submarine officer.

His three-quarter-hour search completed, the officer and men emerged from the hold. In a quiet voice, he made a short speech to the 24 passengers.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he explained, "I regret having detained you, but this is war. We did not wish war with England, but we were forced into it. What would you think if somebody took a piece of your southern coast? You wouldn't like it."

Then with a bow from the waist, he said, "goodbye," shook hands with Stork, and asked, "we're not so barbarous, are we, except that I do need a shave? I'll see you at a tea dance in New York."

Then over the side, he and his men disappeared.

One Wacosta passenger, Mrs. H. E. Jones of Mobile, tried to photograph the German sailors, but stopped when they slapped their holstered pistols and shouted at her in German.

"Oh, boy, were they handsome!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones.

and Denmark despite the danger of mines, hurried to port and added their accounts of the sounds of firing.

Hearers agreed that at least 200 shots were given or exchanged and they thought the sounds were cannon fire and not bombs.

The fact that the shots were heard along the whole of a 70-mile streatch of coast indicated that if it was a battle it was a terrific one.

Senator Radcliffe Favors Change in Neutrality Polic

Tydings Silent on View as He Leaves for Washington

Baltimore, Sept. 20. (AP)—Senator George L. Radcliffe (D-Md) generally aligned himself today with congressional forces seeking revision of the neutrality act at the special session opening tomorrow.

At the same time the junior senator emphasized he preferred to "keep an open mind" on details of the program he would support pending presentation by President Roosevelt of the administration program for a new neutrality statute.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, at his Harford home today pending his departure for Washington, delayed a statement of his stand on the question.

Radcliffe said his aim was an act which would effectively keep the United States out of the European war. The existing law, he contended, is inadequate for that purpose and potentially harmful to the country's interests.

"We ought to see what the President proposes," he explained. "It is my opinion, though, that some sort of cash-and-carry requirement would be the proper step. That would accomplish a reasonable regulation of all trade with warring nations. It would serve to keep us out of entanglements and provocations that might lead to war. . . .

"I expect to go to Washington with an open mind to hear what is proposed and measure it against what I believe to be the needs of keeping us out of war. That is the vital thing—peace for America."

Radcliffe described the present neutrality act as "lop-sided and totally inadequate."

"Tuxedo Bandit" Refused Pardon

Baltimore, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Baltimore "Tuxedo bandit," who wore dinner clothes during a $200 drug store holdup, was refused a pardon today although he asked it so he could study at a Chicago Bible institute.

Parole Director Herman M. Moyer said pardons should be restricted to men whose innocence has been proven after conviction and that he declined to recommend executive clemency to Frank Wooten because he had been guilty of a role violation.

Wooten, sentenced in 1927 to 3 years in the penitentiary, was paroled in 1935 and returned to prison the following year for parole violation, Moser said. He added that Wooten had made three attempts to obtain his freedom through writs of habeas corpus. All were refused.

Wooten claimed that he was convicted on three charges of holdup because there were three persons in the drugstore. He contended he was guilty of only one holdup although there were three victims.

Wooten and a companion were convicted of entering an East Baltimore drug store and escaping a few minutes after the holdup Wooten, still in dinner jacket, approached police at the drugstore and gave himself up, saying his conscience was bothering him.

The Handbill Ordinance

MAGISTRATE OLIVER H. BRUCE, JR., has properly dismissed the cases against six members of Jehovah's Witnesses who were arrested under charges of violating the municipal handbill ordinance for the very simple reason that the law does not apply to a religious group. He could have taken no other action.

That ordinance has never been so applied, has never been intended to apply, to any religious group during the years there has been occupational regulation here. If members of a church, or the Salvation Army, or the Epworth League, or any other religious body, have voluntarily distributed handbills, posters, cards or other printed matter inviting the people to an ice cream social, a lecture or an entertainment, or even setting forth doctrinal views, they have never been disturbed. Nor should they have been disturbed.

There are those who seem to make a business of manufacturing arguments or issues for selfish purposes, who make a sort of racketeering practice of beating the breast and yelling about the freedom of the press whenever the so-called handbill ordinance is called into question; and who call it into question whenever they haven't much else to get excited about, or to excite others about, whether any reason exists or not for calling it up.

These breast-beaters do not take the occasion to consider the fact that absolute freedom of the press does not obtain in this country in the sense that anybody may print or publish any vicious or defamatory tirade they wish without being called to account for it. For the better conduct of society and the preservation of the peace, certain wholesome safeguards have always been provided to prevent abuse of the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press, as well as the freedom of religion and the peaceable assemblage of persons, which are likewise guaranteed by the constitution.

No one may recklessly publish or proclaim defamatory attacks without running afoul of laws designed to attach responsibility for libellous and slanderous utterances. No one may publish any seditious or obscene matter. And, it is well to note that in addition to statutory laws governing such subjects, there are moral laws to be observed in the business of publication, despite the fact that some unfortunately do not seem to have any such moral sense. One of our greatest daily newspapers prints at the top of its front page the slogan of "All the News That Is Fit To Print," an implication that there is news which is not fit to print. And that there is often such news all editors are painfully aware.

So, too, do we have police regulations preventing rowdies or fanatics from disturbing religious worship, or other like activities, or from causing damage or destruction in cases of riotous assemblage. All the rights herein involved are constitutionally guaranteed—the right is given and all may exercise it but in so doing they must exercise it decently and without injury to others.

Practically every city and town in the country has adopted regulations respecting the scattering of handbills and the like wantonly and promiscuously in the streets and on private premises of others. Some of these regulations are based on health reasons, looking to the prevention of filth accumulation and the promotion of sanitary measures. The most of them are based on an inherent police power and look to the orderly conduct of businesses operating in a community.

The local ordinance is based largely upon the latter consideration. It involves also in lesser measure an item of revenue as part of the general revenue plan to obtain sufficient funds for the operation of local government for the protection and comfort of the people. But it does not concern the content of the printed page. No censorship is involved. It is merely an occupational regulation, designed to control the conduct of a distributing business whenever handbills or the like are put out by paid employes of persons or concerns engaged in the business on a commercial basis. It does not, as already noted, affect the voluntary distribution of printed matter.

As a matter of fact, the conduct of practically every business is governed by regulatory laws, some even by the state and by the federal government, as witnesseth laws respecting factories, utilities, abattoirs, foodstuffs, drugs and what not. The company that publishes this newspaper may not dump its refuse in the middle of South Mechanic street. Laws designed to promote cleanliness, health and sanitation, and to permit the safe flow of traffic prevent such action by means of penalties prescribed as deterrents. This company pays various business taxes. (In fact, too many of them.) But what in the name of reason have these restrictions and obligations to do with the freedom of the press? In the minds of some who entertain perverted ideas, they should shatter the federal constitution and strip the individual or company of all rights guaranteed thereunder.

A lot of misinformation has been spread locally about the rulings of the federal supreme court in the handbill case arising from Georgia and in the Hague case in New Jersey. Much has been read into those decisions that does not appear therein. The Hague case pertained in chief to the right of assembly and of free speech, and the question of the freedom of the press was merely incidental but conformable to constitutional provisions. In the Georgia case, a local community went too far with its handbill regulatory provisions and provided not only for the issuance of permits for the privilege, but also wrongfully embodied the right to refuse such permits. That was quite properly held to be in violation of a constitutional guarantee. But in that case it was admitted that a community or a state has the right under its police powers to impose certain regulations for the distribution of handbills.

The local handbill ordinance, however, is quite a different thing from the one outlawed in Georgia. It is merely an occupational regulation, in keeping with like provisions governing various occupations. It imposes a license fee for the conduct of a certain kind of business just as the city requires licenses for the conduct of various other business, merchandising or manufacturing operations. It carries no provision of permit refusals. All and everybody can take out this permit, or license, by paying the required fee.

It is generally regarded in legal circles that this regulatory ordinance conforms to constitutional principles and will withstand any attack on such grounds. In fact, it was some time ago submitted to a distinguished group of legal lights. Last year this and other like municipal ordinances were brought up for general discussion before the National Conference of City Solicitors, meeting in Washington, and it was the unanimous opinion of the lawyers comprising that body that such regulations, coupled with licensing fees, are wholly constitutional.

It would appear that a few persons who want to raise the dust for personal advertisement or selfish aggrandisement by manufacturing false, misleading or inconsequential issues, are making a mountain out of a mole-hill with their "bellyaching" over the local handbill ordinance. If they are really griped about it, they would do well to subject their ailment to a judicial diagnosis—and the machinery thereof is available to all.

Only a Blusterer

AFTER wading through the reports of the speech made at Danzig by Adalf Hitler, one comes out with the feeling that it was a vainglorious fusillade of arrogance, deceit and braggadocio.

But beneath his ranting words there is to be detected a fearfulness of his position, a feeling that he has bitten off much more than he can chew and that he would like to get it over with as speedily as possible while for the nonce he can appear in the role of a victor by reason of having overwhelmed and destroyed Poland with superior numbers and armament. It is reminiscent of the blustering bully in the school lot.

Hitler, of course, would like to have peace with Great Britain and France now on his own terms. But he is in a position where he cannot stop the war with blustering threats and oily promises. He has all he wants now, he says, and would be perfectly content to divide up what spoils he has and let it go at that. But his word as to that is utterly worthless. He gave it before in the case of Danzig and the Corridor, in the case of Austria and in the case of Czechoslovakia only to break it whenever opportunity presented. With each succeeding step he proved himself a liar.

So what now would his word be worth? Absolutely nothing. Hitler may not like the idea of going through with a long war of attrition, but he made his bed and now he must lie in it.

No One Wins

H. G. WELLS, the famed prognosticator, sees the war as bringing "an outcome less hopeful than in 1914." The English historian views the future in the light of the past and declares that "for me it is not merely winning the war, only whether the world will know better times after it is ended." He says that the struggle is not a "new war," but a continuation of the conflict of 1914 which created rather than solved problems.

Mr. Wells recognizes a fundamental truth in his disinclination to prophesy who will win the war. He knows that no one wins.

Of course, it is to be presumed that if politics is "adjourned" for the "emergency," Roosevelt will automatically be continued in office past the retirement date, which has been set as January, 1941.

War correspondents seem unable to agree whether the present European conflict is an encore of the World war or whether the World war was just a rehearsal for this one.

New Dealers are vociferous in their suggestion that partisanship be forgotten during the "crisis." What they mean is the country should let Roosevelt drag it into war.

A Number of Things

By MARSHALL MASLIN

When I was a small boy and would not eat my bread crusts my father used to tell me that if I didn't I'd never have hair on my chest. And he told my sisters that if they didn't eat theirs they wouldn't have curly hair. . . . And long after I stopped believing in Santa Claus I continued to believe, reluctantly, that there might be something in what he said.

I found a rubber band yesterday in a desk drawer, where I had placed it years ago. But it was useless. . . . Lying there all those years, unused and untouched, it had lost its life, given up its ghost. . . . And I think a man, holding a worthless rubber band in his hand, might say to himself: "This, too, will happen to me if I let myself go to waste, if I let my talents, humble though they may be, go unused."

We raised pigeons when we were boys. Handsome pouter pigeons. Fan tails. Big blue runts. Common chocolate pigeons. And I remember still how they would swoop in a lovely cloud about our barn at twilight, and I remember the ruckelty-coo-coo-ruckelty noise they made in the loft. . . . We had a couple of "tumblers," too, strange birds that flew a hundred feet into the air and let themselves drop swiftly, turning over and over and over. . . . We thought them slightly mad, but still it seems to me that these eccentric birds took more joy out of living than did their more staid companions.

Out of this office a few moments ago went a happy man. A man who has suffered much, known many disappointments, had many sorrows—and still was happy! . . . I don't know how he does it, but I know that the gift that is his for enduring happiness is the most precious any man can have.

Sometimes I hear a man flash out with: "What do I care?" . . . Sullenly, defiantly, he says it and looks nobody. . . . Because, when a man says, "What do I care?" in just that way in his heart he is hurt and cares deeply and would be comforted.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Naturally, you can't expect an ambitious lad to stay long in the sneeze racket, or to be long content with such a trifling business as bundle - snatching. Hymie Augen, who drops in occasionally to to bring back some of our yesterdays, is inclined to think that Red Hook and Bowery lads of his day had a lot more enterprise than the boys of today. He is, on the whole, rather gloomy about our rising generation and doesn't think it will ever amount to much. It's like this:

"Over around the navy yard the other day, I glom an old friend of mine and I says howsa kid? meaning his youngest kid. He wanted to hold out on me, but pretty soon I get the lay. This mug is still snatching packages over in Brooklyn, and he's been at it for around five years now.

"I tell my friend that children aren't brought up the way they used to be—that in my day this boy would be getting himself some hot jewelry, or even a little satchel trick, and start getting up in the world. But I saw I was hurting his feelings, and there was nothing I could do about it anyway, so I just piped down and we talked about old times.

Joe's Boy, Also

"The other day, I ran into Lumpy Joe Crocci and he tells me that the trouble he is having with his boy. This boy, Joe tells me, has a pair of pipes like Caruso and he wants to get into the singing and acting business. It was the first time I saw old Joe in years. About twenty years ago, Joe gets to running the Michele J. Conti Recreation club, quits fighting etc. and brings up a nice little family. He tells me this boy had two years in college and then his music teacher said he should go on the stage right away and the boy start burning up shoe leather trying to get a job and it's still no dice. The boy gets discouraged and old Joe is worrying himself sick about him.

A Real Business

"The boys around Miner's Bowery were never stopped by anything like that. Amateur night was a real business in those days. The system was to put in the fix with the judges and send in your man. They used to give cash prizes, and when you got the system organized in all the amatur night houses it made a nice little business.

"If you figured you wanted to be a hoofer or you thought you were pretty good singing 'My Pearl is a Bowery Girl,' you got a send-in to the proper party and your turn got the prize money. That went mostly to the judges and the organization, but you got set in the acting business and you didn't have to get tracksore running around looking for a job. It sure did seem easier to get ahead in those days and young people just didn't sit around and smoke cigarettes, either. They were in there swinging.

"The youngsters are spoiled these days and a lot of them aren't brought up right. When I was a young parent I didn't think anything of whaling a kid plenty if he didn't behave. I'm thinking of old Gaspipe Eagan and his boy Loule. This Loule was smart in the head, but he was a fresh ginney and the old man had a lot of trouble with him.

Done With Piece of Hose

"Gaspipe had a nice prosperous little fence and he breaks in the boy handling hot plumbing, etc. Old Gaspipe don't stand for no foolishness and he has the family around the center table lamp every night and everybody is in the hay by 10 o'clock. Pretty soon this boy Loule is dressing up and stepping out, and the old man catches him sneaking out when he is supposed to be in bed. Gaspipe figures Loule is doing something he shouldn't and gets a flatfoot to tail him.

"It takes the flatfoot about a week to catch up with Loule. He slips the old man an earful and old Joe is laying for Loule like a submarine when he comes home that night. When Loule comes to supper, the old man is so busted up he can hardly speak. 'To think a boy of mine should be smuggling chinks,' he sobs. Then he gets untracked and goes over Loule with a big piece of hose he kept in the house.

"That was the end of this dirty chink-smuggling business. Loule goes back to work in the family fence makes good and works up a nice little business of his own. That's how it was. What this country needs is a length of wire-mesh hose hung behind every kitchen stove."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SHIPWRECK KELLY

Washington Pair Form Partnership For Privateering with a Submarine

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Washington newspaper and business men contemplate taking advantage of a provision of the United States constitution which has lain dormant for many a years to launch an enterprise (contingent upon Uncle Sam's ultimate participation in the pending European conflict) that bids fair to make the war profiteers of 1914-18 look like pikers.

Charles P. Stewart

Article 2, section 8 and paragraph 11 of the constitution provides that:

"Congress shall have power to declare war, to grant letters of marque and reprisal," et cetera.

That is to say, when Uncle Sam is at war private American ship owners constitutionally can be authorized to prey, with their own craft, upon enemy vessels or upon neutral contraband carriers on the high seas, and realize financially upon their seizure for their personal benefit.

This business sounds a good deal like piracy.

But It Is Legal

Nevertheless, it's internationally legal. The crew of a privateer, as such raiders once were known, rates like the crew of any man-o'-war. Captured, its members are war prisoners, but nothing worse than that—not if they're duly accredited privateersmen by their home government. Of course, a privateer can properly be sunk, same as any warship. And it's all right for the enemy to kill its personnel in action. Nor do I contend that a bunch of privateersmen, if caught, would be likely to receive much consideration — but, under international law, they're entitled to the same treatment as any other war prisoners.

In Daniel Webster's Day

America's last letters of marque and reprisal were issued in 1851 and were signed by Secretary of State Daniel Webster. It was when Maximilian was just butting into Mexico. The expected emergency didn't develop, so the authorization lapsed, but we'd done considerable privateering earlier than that.

And the system as Americanly constitutional today as ever it was—provided congress votes to put it into effect.

Accordingly Homer Dodge and Aled Davies, a couple of Washington journalists, have formed a limited partnership to ask for marque and reprisal letters if and when the United States declares war against any foreign country or if and when any foreign country declares war against us.

The partnership's plan contemplates the use of a submarine, to catch enemy merchantmen and contraband-carrying neutrals—taking captured craft into American ports, into allied ports or into neutral ports, where they can be verified as the capturers' property before prize courts. Ridiculous? Maybe so, but it's constitutional.

Into the Millions

It is pointed out that the German liner Bremen, had she been overhauled by a privateer, would have been worth around $25,000,000 to her captors. The smallest tanker, the most insignificant ocean-going cargo boat, would be worth big money.

The original investors in the enterprise will have what used to be called, in old whaling days, the "first lay"; that is the largest share. However, every member of the submarine's crew and every member of the crews of any attendant surface craft or co-operating seaplanes will get his split.

It isn't to be forgotten, either, that several of the more notable fortunes in olden-day New England and along the entire Atlantic seaboard were founded on privateering during the wars of Independence and of 1812.

Plenty of Support

The nutty part of it is that Dodge and Davis are getting a good bit of support.

I've seen sound businessmen's checks up to a total of more than $25,000 scooped in by that pair already for American privateering — and it's only a few days that they have been operating. They haven't any money of their own to speak of—a bright idea merely.

The contributors make their checks payable "when the United States issues letters of marque and reprisal."

After expenses have been paid and the working privateersmen have had their divvy the dividends will be pro-rated in proportion to investments. Suppose 100 individuals put up $1,000 apiece, each will get only one 100th of the remaining kitty, but that might mean 1,000 per cent on his subscription.

It's such a safe bargain, too. If congress doesn't vote letters of marque and reprisal it doesn't cost anything. If it does look at the practical certainty of huge profits—assuming, to be sure, that the privateering submarine isn't put out of business by some enemy ship before it's scored any prizes.

Regimentation Certain for U. S. In Case of War

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat.

When the United States entered the World war it became necessary for some authority to take charge of the Nation's complex overburdened industrial machinery. So, in July of that year, the War Industries Board was established. However, it took nearly twelve months to get the War Industries Board's machinery perfected. Today the experts at Washington say government could establish a similar plan on short notice.

A National Resources Board is already in existence; it is prepared to set up subcommittees to deal with problems of transportation, manufacturing facilities and raw materials. It has at its disposal the research of the already organized National Resources Planning Board, which has just turned in an exhaustive report on American resources in fuel and power. The program which has been set up in the form of the War Department's Industrial Plan could, says Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, be handed to Congress for approval within twenty-four hours.

This plan provides for the most drastic regimentation of American life that has ever been seriously proposed in this country. It would empower the president, through the War Resources Board, to control labor, industry, finance and agriculture. Under the plan, the government could fix all prices, could tell any individual or company how much of any given raw material it might buy, could license all manufacturers, merchants and public service corporations, could regulate the manufacture, transportation, sale and distribution of all articles produced in America, could commandeer any establishment, could say whether a given issue of securities could be marketed, could control all labor, control completely the supply and distribution of raw materials, could on short notice run agriculture, industry, labor, business and finance down to the smallest detail.

In other words, in the event of war, the United States would become a totalitarian state in which the president of the republic would enjoy and could exercise all of the powers now possessed by Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler.

On the Record

By William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor

It is problematic just how long our present social order can stand the strain of continued public spending for relief and relief projects. Certain it is, however, that so long as these millions are idle, and until they are re-employed in private industry, government spending for relief purposes must continue.

A Good Rule To Follow

From the Philadelphia Inquirer

The message addressed by W. Gibson Carey, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, to its members contains some pertinent thoughts for these trying times. American business men, as he says, have no wish to profit from the war misery abroad. The best contribution they can make to their country's safety is to cooperate in solving the Nation's domestic problems.

"We are apt to forget that we ourselves are not at war and that, God willing, we shall avoid such a catastrophe. The essential thing is for us to build our national strength on self-discipline, productivity and good will. It is a time for maximum effort, great tolerance and fervent prayer."

The problems of unemployment and relief, better industrial relations and putting the Government on a firm financial foundation are still with us, however momentarily obscured by the war abroad.

In thinking of others' troubles we cannot afford to neglect the imperative needs of our own household.

"Business as usual," is a good rule for this nation to follow. It needs no excuse or apology. The policy of sticking to our own business may not please some other nations or even some of our own people. But it spells safety and strength for ourselves and ability to render service to civilization the world over—or what may be left of it after the madness of war has run its terrible course.

Can't Keep Out Dogma Is Silly

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HUGH JOHNSON

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 20—Far beyond any actual military development startling as these have been, is the bone - headed blundering of British and French statecraft in all this dreary, bloody business. It sets an all-time record.

Soldiers are at the mercy of so-called statesmen. The best of generalship engaged with one military enemy is helpless if the political power that pushed it into the fight did not consider or prepare it to defend against a sudden attack by another and more powerful enemy on its flank and rear. Never have soldiers been so let down by statesmen in the history of the world.

The "peace-loving" nations sacrificed Czechoslovakia to their blundering—guessing wrongly that Hitler would not march. They encouraged Poland to hopeless resistance, promising aid, but guessing wrongly that Russia would not march. They gambled madly on war when they were not ready for war and had no conception of the position. They staked what? Not their own countries and armies but Poland and her armies—and now these are gone the way of Czechoslovakia and her armies.

They didn't know or guess what Russia and Germany were doing. They did not guess what both were doing with Jaan. Yet they risked the very existence of two other nations on their ignorance and unreadiness.

More Guessing

So wat next? More guessing and more unreadiness to deal with the outcome. The guess now is that the German-Russian deal includes the return of the small and helpless Baltic states to Russia, the partition of Rumania as well as Poland between Germany and Russia with a sop to Italy somewhere—and God-knows-what for the Balkan states and Turkey.

It will be difficult to impossible for those nations to resist alone and how can they depend on promises of assistance from Britain or France? This is the kind of selfish double-crossing game of Seven-Toed Pete with deuces wild that we are told we can't keep out of. Britain and France do not conquer because "our destinies are so closely interwoven with theirs."

They blundered themselves and Europe into war and this advice to us amounts to saying that our getting into or keeping out of it depends not primarily on our own policy, interests and statecraft, but primarily on the interests and God-awful blundering statecraft and policy of Britain and France. If that is so, we are in a hell of a fix. We are not an independent sovereign nation but the tail of an unpredictable, undependable and particularly crazy kite.

War of Middle Europe

Of course, it is not so. This is a war of middle-Europe. Since Charlemagne bequeathed his empire these lands have been fought over, captured and recaptured by the very races now fighting and as often as pawns in a continuous chess game. It has happened several times during our own time as colonies of states of the union. In our colonial period, whenever they fought, we fought— as in the French and Indian wars—not because it was our business but because we belonged to them.

We don't belong to any European nation now, unless we sell ourselves down the river. The constant repetition of the pure dogma that we can't keep out is the silliest and yet the most dangerous propaganda now being voiced.

The only apparent new element now is that the Nazi-Fascists-Communists don't believe in human liberty, and we do. They are dictatorships. But so no wis England. So now is France. So will we be if we become involved. The two greatest absurdities being voiced today are that to keep out of the European war we must get into it with its corollary that to preserve our liberties and democracy we must set up a war-power government—which would be the end of both.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

The Handbill Ordinance

MAGISTRATE OLIVER H. BRUCE, JR., has properly dismissed the cases against six members of Jehovah's Witnesses who were arrested under charges of violating the municipal handbill ordinance for the very simple reason that the law does not apply to a religious group. He could have taken no other action.

That ordinance has never been so applied, has never been intended to apply, to any religious group during the years there has been occupational regulation here. If members of a church, or the Salvation Army, or the Epworth League, or any other religious body, have voluntarily distributed handbills, posters, cards or other printed matter inviting the people to an ice cream social, a lecture or an entertainment, or even setting forth doctrinal views, they have never been disturbed. Nor should they have been disturbed.

There are those who seem to make a business of manufacturing arguments or issues for selfish purposes, who make a sort of racketeering practice of beating the breast and yelling about the freedom of the press whenever the so-called handbill ordinance is called into question; and who call it into question whenever they haven't much else to get excited about, or to excite others about, whether any reason exists or not for calling it up.

These breast-beaters do not take the occasion to consider the fact that absolute freedom of the press does not obtain in this country in the sense that anybody may print or publish any vicious or defamatory tirade they wish without being called to account for it. For the better conduct of society and the preservation of the peace, certain wholesome safeguards have always been provided to prevent abuse of the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press, as well as the freedom of religion and the peaceable assemblage of persons, which are likewise guaranteed by the constitution.

No one may recklessly publish or proclaim defamatory attacks without running afoul of laws designed to attach responsibility for libellous and slanderous utterances. No one may publish any seditious or obscene matter. And, it is well to note that in addition to statutory laws governing such subjects, there are moral laws to be observed in the business of publication, despite the fact that some unfortunately do not seem to have any such moral sense. One of our greatest daily newspapers prints at the top of its front page the slogan of "All the News That Is Fit To Print," an implication that there is news which is not fit to print. And that there is often such news all editors are painfully aware.

So, too, do we have police regulations preventing rowdies or fanatics from disturbing religious worship, or other like activities, or from causing damage or destruction in cases of riotous assemblage. All the rights herein involved are constitutionally guaranteed—the right is given and all may exercise it but in so doing they must exercise it decently and without injury to others.

Practically every city and town in the country has adopted regulations respecting the scattering of handbills and the like wantonly and promiscuously in the streets and on private premises of others. Some of these regulations are based on health reasons, looking to the prevention of filth accumulation and the promotion of sanitary measures. The most of them are based on an inherent police power and look to the orderly conduct of businesses operating in a community.

The local ordinance is based largely upon the latter consideration. It involves also in lesser measure an item of revenue as part of the general revenue plan to obtain sufficient funds for the operation of local government for the protection and comfort of the people. But it does not concern the content of the printed page. No censorship is involved. It is merely an occupational regulation, designed to control the conduct of a distributing business whenever handbills or the like are put out by paid employes of persons or concerns engaged in the business on a commercial basis. It does not, as already noted, affect the voluntary distribution of printed matter.

As a matter of fact, the conduct of practically every business is governed by regulatory laws, some even by the state and by the federal government, as witnesseth laws respecting factories, utilities, abattoirs, foodstuffs, drugs and what not. The company that putlishes this newspaper may not dump its refuse in the middle of South Mechanic street. Laws designed to promote cleanliness, health and sanitation, and to permit the safe flow of traffic prevent such action by means of penalties prescribed as deterrents. This company pays various business taxes. (In fact, too many of them.) But what in the name of reason have these restrictions and obligations to do with the freedom of the press? In the minds of some who entertain perverted ideas, they should shatter the federal constitution and strip the individual or company or all rights guaranteed thereunder.

A lot of misinformation has been spread locally about the rulings of the federal supreme court in the handbill case arising from Georgia and in the Hague case in New Jersey. Much has been read into those decisions that does not appear therein. The Hague case pertained to unlawful assembly, and of free speech, and the question of the freedom of the press was merely incidental but conformable to constitutional provisions. In the Georgia case, a local community went too far with its handbill regulatory provisions and provided not only for the issuance of permits for the privilege, but also wrongfully embodied the right to refuse such permits. That was quite properly held to be in violation of a constitutional guarantee. But in that case it was admitted that a community or a state has the right under its police powers to impose certain regulations for the distribution of handbills.

The local handbill ordinance, however, is quite a different thing from the one outlawed in Georgia. It is merely an occupational regulation, in keeping with like provisions governing various occupations. It imposes a license fee for the conduct of a certain kind of business just as the city requires licenses for the conduct of various other business, merchandising or manufacturing operations. It carries no provision of permit refusals. All and everybody can take out this permit, or license, by paying the required fee.

It is generally regarded in legal circles that this regulatory ordinance conforms to constitutional principles and will withstand any attack on such grounds. In fact, it was some time ago submitted to a distinguished group of legal lights. Last year this and other like municipal ordinances were brought up for general discussion before the National Conference of City Solicitors, meeting in Washington, and it was the unanimous opinion of the lawyers comprising that body that such regulations, coupled with licensing fees, are wholly constitutional.

It would appear that a few persons who want to raise the dust for personal advertisement or selfish aggrandisement by manufacturing false, misleading or inconsequential issues, are making a mountain out of a mole-hill with their "bellyaching" over the local handbill ordinance. If they are really griped about it, they would do well to subject their ailment to a judicial diagnosis—and the machinery thereof is available to all.

Only a Blusterer

AFTER wading through the reports of the speech made at Danzig by Adalf Hitler, one comes out with the feeling that it was a vainglorious fusillade of arrogance, deceit and braggadocio.

But beneath his ranting words there is to be detected a fearfulness of his position, a feeling that he has bitten off much more than he can chew and that he would like to get it over with as speedily as possible while for the nonce he can appear in the role of a victor by reason of having overwhelmed and destroyed Poland with superior numbers and armament. It is reminiscent of the blustering bully in the school lot.

Hitler, of course, would like to have peace with Great Britain and France now on his own terms. But he is in a position where he cannot stop the war with blustering threats and oily promises. He has all he wants now, he says, and would be perfectly content to divide up what spoils he has and let it go at that. But his word as to that is utterly worthless. He gave it before in the case of Danzig and the Corridor, in the case of Austria and in the case of Czechoslovakia only to break it whenever opportunity presented. With each succeeding step he proved himself a liar.

So what now would his word be worth? Absolutely nothing. Hitler may not like the idea of going through with a long war of attrition, but he made his bed and now he must lie in it.

No One Wins

H. G. WELLS, the famed prognosticator, sees the war as bringing "an outcome less hopeful than in 1914." The English historian views the future in the light of the past and declares that "for me it is not merely winning the war, only whether the world will know better times after it is ended." He says that the struggle is not a "new war," but a continuation of the conflict of 1914 which created rather than solved problems.

Mr. Wells recognizes a fundamental truth in his disinclination to prophesy who will win the war. He knows that no one wins.

Of course, it is to be presumed that if politics is "adjourned" for the "emergency," Roosevelt will automatically be continued in office past the retirement date, which has been set as January, 1941.

War correspondents seem unable to agree whether the present European conflict is an encore of the World war or whether the World war was just a rehearsal for this one.

New Dealers are vociferous in their suggestion that partisanship be forgotten during the "crisis." What they mean is the country should let Roosevelt drag it into war.

Naturally, you can't expect an ambitious lad to stay long in the sneeze racket, or to be long content with such a trifling business as bundle - snatching. Hymie Augen, who drops in occasionally to to bring back some of our yesterdays, is inclined to think that Red Hook and Bowery lads of his day had a lot more enterprise than the boys of today. He is, on the whole, rather gloomy about our rising generation and doesn't think it will ever amount to much. It's like this:

"Over around the navy yard the other day, I glom an old friend of mine and I says howsa kid? meaning his youngest kid. He wanted to hold out on me, but pretty soon I get the lay. This mug is still snatching packages over in Brooklyn, and he's been at it for around five years now.

"I tell my friend that children aren't brought up the way they used to be—that in my day this boy would be getting himself some hot jewelry, or even a little satchel trick, and start getting up in the world. But I saw I was hurting his feelings, and there was nothing I could do about it anyway, so I just piped down and we talked about old times.

Joe's Boy, Also

"The other day, I ran into Lumpy Joe Crocci and he tells me that the trouble he is having with his boy. This boy, Joe tells me, has a pair of pipes like Caruso and he wants to get into the singing and acting business. It was the first time I saw old Joe in years. About twenty years ago, Joe gets to running the Michele J. Conti Recreation club, quits fighting etc. and brings up a nice little family. He tells me this boy had two years in college and then his music teacher said he should go on the stage right away and the boy start burning up shoe leather trying to get a job and it's still no dice. The boy gets discouraged and old Joe is worrying himself sick about him.

A Real Business

"The boys around Miner's Bowery were never stopped by anything like that. Amateur night was a real business in those days. The system was to put in the fix with the judges and send in your man. They used to give cash prizes, and when you got the system organized in all the amatur night houses it made a nice little business.

"If you figured you wanted to be a hoofer or you thought you were pretty good singing 'My Pearl is a Bowery Girl,' you got a send-in to the proper party and your turn got the prize money. That went mostly to the judges and the organization, but you got set in the acting business and you didn't have to get tracksore running around looking for a job. It sure did seem easier to get ahead in those days and young people just didn't sit around and smoke cigarettes, either. They were in there swinging.

"The youngsters are spoiled these days and a lot of them aren't brought up right. When I was a young parent I didn't think anything of whaling a kid plenty if he didn't behave. I'm thinking of old Gaspipe Eagan and his boy Loule. This Loule was smart in the head, but he was a fresh ginney and the old man had a lot of trouble with him.

Done With Piece of Hose

"Gaspipe had a nice prosperous little fence and he breaks in the boy handling hot plumbing, etc. Old Gaspipe don't stand for no foolishness and he has the family around the center table lamp every night and everybody is in the hay by 10 o'clock. Pretty soon this boy Loule is dressing up and stepping out, and the old man catches him sneaking out when he is supposed to be in bed. Gaspipe figures Loule is doing something he shouldn't and gets a flatfoot to tail him.

"It takes the flatfoot about a week to catch up with Loule. He slips the old man an earful and old Joe is laying for Loule like a submarine when he comes home that night. When Loule comes to supper, the old man is so busted up he can hardly speak. 'To think a boy of mine should be smuggling chinks,' he sobs. Then he gets untracked and goes over Loule with a big piece of hose he kept in the house.

"That was the end of this dirty chink-smuggling business. Loule goes back to work in the family fence makes good and works up a nice little business of his own. That's how it was. What this country needs is a length of wire-mesh hose hung behind every kitchen stove."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SHIPWRECK KELLY

Central Press Columnist

Washington newspaper and business men contemplate taking advantage of a provision of the United States constitution which has lain dormant for many a years to launch an enterprise (contingent upon Uncle Sam's ultimate participation in the pending European conflict) that bids fair to make the war profiteers of 1914-18 look like pikers.

Charles P. Stewart

Article 2, section 8 and paragraph 11 of the constitution provides that:

"Congress shall have power to declare war, to grant letters of marque and reprisal," et cetera.

That is to say, when Uncle Sam is at war private American ship owners constitutionally can be authorized to prey, with their own craft, upon enemy vessels or upon neutral contraband carriers on the high seas, and realize financially upon their seizure for their personal benefit.

This business sounds a good deal like piracy.

But It Is Legal

Nevertheless, it's internationally legal. The crew of a privateer, as such raiders once were known, rates like the crew of any man-o'-war. Captured, its members are war prisoners, but nothing worse than that—not if they're duly accredited privateersmen by their home government. Of course, a privateer can properly be sunk, same as any warship. And it's all right for the enemy to kill its personnel in action. Nor do I contend that a bunch of privateersmen, if caught, would be likely to receive much consideration — but, under international law, they're entitled to the same treatment as any other war prisoners.

In Daniel Webster's Day

America's last letters of marque and reprisal were issued in 1851 and were signed by Secretary of State Daniel Webster. It was when Maximilian was just butting into Mexico. The expected emergency didn't develop, so the authorization lapsed, but we'd done considerable privateering earlier than that.

And the system as Americanly constitutional today as ever it was—provided congress votes to put it into effect.

Accordingly Homer Dodge and Aled Davies, a couple of Washington journalists, have formed a limited partnership to ask for marque and reprisal letters if and when the United States declares war against any foreign country or if and when any foreign country declares war against us.

The partnership's plan contemplates the use of a submarine, to catch enemy merchantmen and contraband-carrying neutrals—taking captured craft into American ports, into allied ports or into neutral ports, where they can be verified as the capturers' property before prize courts. Ridiculous? Maybe so, but it's constitutional.

Into the Millions

It is pointed out that the German liner Bremen, had she been overhauled by a privateer, would have been worth around $25,000,000 to her captors. The smallest tanker, the most insignificant ocean-going cargo boat, would be worth big money.

The original investors in the enterprise will have what used to be called, in old whaling days, the "first lay"; that is the largest share. However, every member of the submarine's crew and every member of the crews of any attendant surface craft or co-operating seaplanes will get his split.

It isn't to be forgotten, either, that several of the more notable fortunes in olden-day New England and along the entire Atlantic seaboard were founded on privateering during the wars of Independence and of 1812.

Plenty of Support

The nutty part of it is that Dodge and Davis are getting a good bit of support.

I've seen sound businessmen's checks up to a total of more than $25,000 scooped in by that pair already for American privateering — and it's only a few days that they have been operating. They haven't any money of their own to speak of—a bright idea merely.

The contributors make their checks payable "when the United States issues letters of marque and reprisal."

After expenses have been paid and the working privateersmen have had their divvy the dividends will be pro-rated in proportion to investments. Suppose 100 individuals put up $1,000 apiece, each will get only one 100th of the remaining kitty, but that might mean 1,000 per cent on his subscription.

It's such a safe bargain, too. If congress doesn't vote letters of marque and reprisal it doesn't cost anything. If it does look at the practical certainty of huge profits—assuming, to be sure, that the privateering submarine isn't put out of business by some enemy ship before it's scored any prizes.

Regimentation Certain for U. S. In Case of War

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat.

When the United States entered the World war it became necessary for some authority to take charge of the Nation's complex overburdened industrial machinery. So, in July of that year, the War Industries Board was established. However, it took nearly twelve months to get the War Industries Board's machinery perfected. Today the experts at Washington say government could establish a similar plan on short notice.

A National Resources Board is already in existence; it is prepared to set up subcommittees to deal with problems of transportation, manufacturing facilities and raw materials. It has at its disposal the research of the already organized National Resources Planning Board, which has just turned in an exhaustive report on American resources in fuel and power. The program which has been set up in the form of the War Department's Industrial Plan could, says Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, be handed to Congress for approval within twenty-four hours.

This plan provides for the most drastic regimentation of American life that has ever been seriously proposed in this country. It would empower the president, through the War Resources Board, to control labor, industry, finance and agriculture. Under the plan, the government could fix all prices, could tell any individual or company how much of any given raw material it might buy, could license all manufacturers, merchants and public service corporations, could regulate the manufacture, transportation, sale and distribution of all articles produced in America, could commandeer any establishment, could say whether a given issue of securities could be marketed, could control all labor, control completely the supply and distribution of raw materials, could on short notice run agriculture, industry, labor, business and finance down to the smallest detail.

In other words, in the event of war, the United States would become a totalitarian state in which the president of the republic would enjoy and could exercise all of the powers now possessed by Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler.

On the Record

By William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor

It is problematic just how long our present social order can stand the strain of continued public spending for relief and relief projects. Certain it is, however, that so long as these millions are idle, and until they are re-employed in private industry, government spending for relief purposes must continue.

A Good Rule To Follow

From the Philadelphia Inquirer

The message addressed by W. Gibson Carey, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, to its members contains some pertinent thoughts for these trying times. American business men, as he says, have no wish to profit from the war misery abroad. The best contribution they can make to their country's safety is to cooperate in solving the Nation's domestic problems.

"We are apt to forget that we ourselves are not at war and that, God willing, we shall avoid such a catastrophe. The essential thing is for us to build our national strength on self-discipline, productivity and good will. It is a time for maximum effort, great tolerance and fervent prayer."

The problems of unemployment and relief, better industrial relations and putting the Government on a firm financial foundation are still with us, however momentarily obscured by the war abroad.

In thinking of others' troubles we cannot afford to neglect the imperative needs of our own household.

"Business as usual," is a good rule for this nation to follow. It needs no excuse or apology. The policy of sticking to our own business may not please some other nations or even some of our own people. But it spells safety and strength for ourselves and ability to render service to civilization the world over—or what may be left of it after the madness of war has run its terrible course.

Can't Keep Out Dogma Is Silly

HUGH JOHNSON

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 20—Far beyond any actual military development, startling as these have been, is the bone - headed blundering of British and French statecraft in all this dreary, bloody business. It sets an all-time record.

Soldiers are at the mercy of so-called statesmen. The best of generalship engaged with one military enemy is helpless if the political power that pushed it into the fight did not consider or prepare it to defend against a sudden attack by another and more powerful enemy on its flank and rear. Never have soldiers been so let down by statesmen in the history of the world.

The "peace-loving" nations sacrificed Czechoslovakia to their blundering—guessing wrongly that Hitler would not march. They encouraged Poland to hopeless resistance, promising aid, but guessing wrongly that Russia would not march. They gambled madly on war when they were not ready for war and had no conception of the position. They staked what? Not their own countries and armies but Poland and her armies—and now these are gone the way of Czechoslovakia and her armies.

They didn't know or guess what Russia and Germany were doing. They did not guess what both were doing with Jaan. Yet they risked the very existence of two other nations on their ignorance and their unreadiness.

More Guessing

So wat next? More guessing and more unreadiness to deal with the outcome. The guess now is that the German-Russian deal includes the return of the small and helpless Baltic states to Russia, the partition of Rumania as well as Poland and between Germany and Russia with a sop to Italy somewhere—and God-knows-what for the Balkan states and Turkey.

It will be difficult to impose for those nations to resist alone and how can they depend on promises of assistance from Britain or France? This is the kind of selfish double-crossing game of Seven-Toed Pete with deuces wild that we are told we can't keep out of. Britain and France do not conquer because "our destinies are so closely interwoven with theirs."

They blundered themselves into Europe into war and this advice to us amounts to saying that our getting into or keeping out of war depends not primarily on our own policy, interests and statecraft, but primarily on the interests and God-awful blundering statecraft and policy of Britain and France. If that is so, we are in a hell of a fix. We are not an independent sovereign nation but the tail of an unpredictable, undependable and particularly crazy kite.

War of Middle Europe

Of course, it is not so. This is a war of middle-Europe. Since Charlemagne bequeather his empire these lands have been fought over, captured and recaptured by the very races now fighting and as often as pawns in a continuous chess game. It has happened several times during our own time as colonies of states of the union. In our colonial period, whenever they fought, we fought— as in the French and Indian wars—not because it was our business but because we belonged to them.

We don't belong to any European nation now, unless we sell ourselves down the river. The constant repetition of the pure dogma that we can't keep out is the silliest and yet the most dangerous propaganda now being voiced.

The only apparent new element now is that the Nazi-Fascists-Communists don't believe in human liberty, and we do. They are dictatorships. But so no wis England. So now is France. So will we be if we become involved. The two greatest absurdities being voiced today are that to keep out of the European war we must get into it with its corollary that to preserve our liberties and democracy we must set up a war-power government—which would be the end of both.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Poorest paid careers for college graduates, according to a United States Office of Education-WPA survey, are in journalism, the ministry and clerical work. Average annual income is under $2,000 in these groups.

Thirty-four per cent of the total number of employes in Soviet Russia are women. There are now about 8,500,000 women workers in Russia.

The largest door in England is said to be the new one at the airport at Heston. It is 200 feet wide and thirty feet high, and is controlled by hand or electricity.

Finland, which gave women the vote in 1906, was the first European country to do so.

Judith Calms Two Youngsters By Making a Chore Fun

"Once upon a time . . ."

By LYDIA GRAY SHAW
AP Feature Service Writer

"Read me the funnies," David pleaded, waving the paper in front of his mother.

"David, I haven't time." Judith criss-crossed the darning thread in another sock as she answered. "Your socks and Daddy's to mend, and then Teddy's are beginning to get holes in them. Look, I have all that pile to do!"

David wasn't impressed. "You make me stay in the house because you say I run around too much, and then you don't give me anything to do . . . o . . . o . . . !"

"Wouldn't you like to sail your battleship in the tub?"

"Nope."

"How about your blocks?"

"Nope."

"I know what." Judith had an inspiration. "Why don't you ask Helen to read to you?" Perhaps she'd read you a story."

"Aw, she doesn't like to read out loud She never does."

"I'll ask her. Maybe she will today," Judith said. "Come on, let's find out."

Hand in hand they approached Helen, curled up on the couch with a book.

"We want to know . . ." David began.

"If you will . . ." Judith broke in. "Read to me!" squealed David, catching the spirit of the game.

Helen started to laugh. "Oh, two against one, is it, Mother?"

"How about it, Helen?" Judith was pretty sure by now her daughter would agree, but she thought she'd put in a clinching word. "You know your teacher likes to have you practice reading aloud because you don't read very fast. And David is just in the mood for a story."

"But he won't like this one." Helen laid down her book.

"Why not the story about the shoemaker?" Judith was prepared for that problem. "I think he'd like that."

"All right, I'll try."

David sprawled into a comfortable position on the couch.

"Once upon a time there was a shoemaker who lived by a brook," Helen slowly began, pronouncing the words with care.

Judith went back to her sewing, and the darning needle flew. One sock, two socks, soon she had three pairs done. She tip-toed to the door. Yes, Helen was still reading, and David, in the same position, was listening intently, with his eyes fixed on his sister's face.

"The Authority on Authorities"

GOOD FOR OTHER USES

MANY PLAYERS make the mistake of thinking that a hand containing no honors except in an extremely long suit is of no use except for play in that suit. This may be so if the suit is headed by the king or perhaps the ace and then a drop to the jack or lower. But if the suit is a solid one, headed by the three top honors, it may be just as useful at No Trumps as at its own suit. In fact, if your partner has some side suit stopped by a mere guarded king, the only possible good contract in the hand may be No Trump. Playing it at spades may mean that the guarded king gets led through, instead of up to, which may upset your entire apple cart.

North went into one of those queer panics which hit some players with long suits, when he heard his partner's 1-Club on this deal. He bid 3-Spades, crowding the bidding in a way seldom done by a really fine bidder. There was no hurry. South then bid 4-Diamonds, North 5-Spades and South 6-No Trumps. North should have realized here that his own funny bidding had made the nature of his hand clear to his partner and should have passed, but he was still in his panic and so bid 7-Spades. This went down two against East's heart lead.

Better bidding after South's 1-Club would have been North 1-Spade, South 2-Diamonds, North 3-Spades, South 4-Hearts, North 4-Spades or 5-Spades, South 6-No Trumps after either of these, and then a pass by North. This could not have been beaten by any defense. A heart lead would have set up the twelfth trick in that suit, a club lead would have done it there, and a lead of anything else would have compelled South to try the obligatory club finesse, which would have worked.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Prospects of Happiness

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past six months I have been going "steady" with a man who is approaching his forties. I am 25. Now he has asked me to marry him and I hesitate. I think a great deal of him, and he loves me. But this is the problem:

He was married to another woman for twelve years but his wife divorced him about a year ago and he claims it was all her fault. However, I've heard that he drank quite a bit at one time, but since going with me he hasn't touched a drop to my knowledge. He has no money at all, and only an insignificant job. If I marry him I will have to keep my position. Would you advise me to marry him? J. B.

Your prospects of happiness do not seem very bright with this man, my dear. If you decide to marry him, I hope you will insist on finding out first why his wife divorced him after twelve years. If he did drink to excess at one time, there is always a question of his drinking again.

Phantom Ranch

by OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT

SHERIFF LON McDANIELS of Cochise county, who had been sent for soon after noon, was on hand at the Brazee home when the Phantom horsemen returned with Luis Escobar, George Brazee had wanted the sheriff there to keep the legal technicalities in hand.

The returning cavalcade looked much less important than it actually was. There was no hint of melodrama, nothing spectacular, about the way the twenty-odd weary men rode back at eight-thirty that night. They had returned most of the stolen Phantom cows to their proper range. They felt that the troubles with thieving foreigners had come to an end.

Lorena marveled at the casual manner in which the details were settled there in the dark. Escobar was handcuffed in a car. Sheriff McDaniels shook hands with George Brazee and Shot Rogers, congratulating them.

"Shot's entitled to the thousand dollars put up by the county for a reward," the sheriff mentioned. "He'll git it. And didn't you match that, George?"

"I did. He'll have my check tonight."

"Well, uh, now you men just stand ready to testify that Escobar was took on American soil," the sheriff said, signifieantly. "You all know us border folk have to sort of take technicalities in our own hands, in the name of justice. Shot, I want to see you in town, son."

And with that the sheriff and his prisoner drove away.

But his departure did not end the talking. In fact, the speculation and explaining and re-telling of the recent episodes lasted there until past midnight again. Everybody was tired, but not too tired to be interested and happy in the main. Every man, woman and child of the ranch personnel was present, except Jerry Dale and the Mexican cook, Concha Gonzales and her children.

"It seems to me," said George Brazee, thinking over the exciting events, "that the luckiest thing was when you taught Lorena how to make Indian smoke signals, Shot. I reckon some good does come of courtin' after all!"

Everybody laughed.

And then little black Midnight popped up to say something. "I c'n make talk signals," he declared. "I been makin' 'em a heap. Me, I can signal with white cloths. Miz Gonzales she pay me reglar to climb up on the high cliff there and signal her talk."

They all looked at him, not understanding. All, that is, except Shot Rogers and Lorena. These two looked significantly at each other, then Shot grabbed the black boy's arm.

"Midnight!" he demanded, intently. "Are you serious? Tell me—you want—Concha paid you to go up on the cliff and signal someone? When? How? Tell me!"

"Yaasuh, Mistuh Shot, she sho' does. I gits a quarter every now an' then from her. I has to climb up there over the house—way up there, see?" The lad pointed to the great cliff that loomed behind them almost frighteningly in the night. "It's a heap of fun. I waves a old white sheet lak she tell me to, an' at night I builds a fire and waves a blanket in front of it. But I don't rightly make no puffs lak what you and Miss Lorena tell about. If you could show me how you all—"

Lorena interrupted him.

"But whom did you signal, Midnight? What messages did you send?"

"I nevuh asked nobody, ma'am. Miz Gonzales, she nevuh say."

"Concha's gone!" Sally Brazee exclaimed. "She left right after Shot came in with the news, I declare! She took her children. She wasn't here to help at supper and I couldn't find her anywhere!"

The deductions were obvious. Midnight's chance revelation opened the discussion anew, excited interesting talk on every side. It became plain to all of them that Concha, the cook, was one of Escobar's hirelings, the ranch spy who had confounded the American fighting men. By her simple act of climbing to the cliff top and signaling to Escobar's outposts on distant observation points, or of having Midnight do it, she could keep Escobar informed reasonably well of the ranch men's movements. Perhaps, too, she had other means of sending messages to the bandit leader's camp. Everybody had a speculation about it, it seemed.

"I declare," said Sally Brazee, tremulously, when it all became clear to her, "I've got to go inside and have a good cry! Lorena, you want to come in now?"

Lorena did not answer.

A few people looked around, but Lorena wasn't in sight, and presently a cowboy explained, "Her and Shot, they walked up towards the windmill, Miss Sally."

The men all smiled, and Sally went inside, and George Brazee said: "Well, boys, I reckon we'll have to arrange another dance celebration since you finally caught Escobar, so let's get some sleep in now."

But young Midnight, the black boy, slipped off into the shadow of night.

Only the black orphan, therefore, saw or heard the highly personal little drama there where the pumped water ran. And he didn't understand most of it.

"—and so we just couldn't help suspecting him, Shot!" Lorena was saying. "But for Uncle George and Aunt Sally's sake, as well as his own, I'm glad Jerry was innocent. Let's never mention it."

"I reckon I owe him an apology for thinking he might be a spy," Shot murmured.

"No. You had every right to suspect him. You and I. But we didn't tell him so. Jerry's just conceited. And lucky—it was his luck that enabled him to see Escobar's men raiding at the Hump. Concha did some expert spying for Escobar that time, too."

"I brought you Escobar's sword, Lorena. For a souvenir."

"I'll love it! And Shot—Jerry proposed to me today!"

"Good lordy!" exclaimed Shot, turning quickly to face her. "Why, I—why, Lorena, I been planning to do that myself!"

"So?"

"Why, yes, ma'am! Honest to gosh, Lorena, I—" the young man swallowed hard. "Say, you told him 'no,' didn't you? You didn't encourage him none—any?"

He had grasped Lorena's shoulders and was shaking them a little now in the stress he felt. Lorena wished she could see his face. Shot blushed so easily!

"I told him I wasn't ready to be married yet," she said.

"Why, Lorena—Lorena! I—why, honey girl! I had been hoping—I—honestly—oh, lord, Lorena, I love you so much I'm about crazy! I've loved you since you got off the train in Blanco, so help me I have! You—we've been through a lot of things out here, but—Lorenia, I ain't—I mean I'm not worth a hang, really. I haven't got anything to speak of. But I'll get $2,000 reward money—it's rightly yours—can't you figure maybe—?"

"Shot, you are hurting my shoulders!"

"—maybe you didn't mean what you told Dale? I aim to settle down. Honest I do! You—we—there's some good ranch land to be had cheap now—look, Lorena, I'll be good to you—I promise! I'll break my back working. I'll—why, honey girl—!" The earnest young man was trembling a little.

Lorena exhaled deeply, then moved in very close to him and rested her head on his breast and reached one slender arm around him to pat him on the shoulder.

Shot kissed her hungrily, and was exalted by the ardor with which she kissed him back.

"Whoo-weeeee!" breathed little black Midnight, from the shadows under the windmill.

(The End)

Lorena exhaled deeply, then moved in very close to him.

"I did. He'll have my check tonight."

"Well, uh, now you men just stand ready to testify that Escobar was took on American soil," the sheriff said, significantly. "You all know us border folk have to sort of take technicalities in our own hands, in the name of justice. Shot, I want to see you in town, son."

And with that the sheriff and his prisoner drove away.

But his departure did not end the talking. In fact, the speculation and explaining and re-telling of the recent episodes lasted there until past midnight again. Everybody was tired, but not too tired to be interested and happy in the main. Every man, woman and child of the ranch personnel was present, except Jerry Dale and the Mexican cook, Concha Gonzales and her children.

"It seems to me," said George Brazee, thinking over the exciting events, "that the luckiest thing was when you taught Lorena how to make Indian smoke signals, Shot. I reckon some good does come of courtin' after all!"

Everybody laughed.

And then little black Midnight popped up to say something. "I'm makes talk signals," he declared. "I been makin' 'em a heap. Ma, I can signal with white cloths. Miz Gonzales she pay me reglar to climb up on the high cliff there and signal her talk."

They all looked at him, not understanding. All, that is, except Shot Rogers and Lorena. These two looked significantly at each other, then Shot grabbed the black boy's arm.

"Midnight!" he demanded, intently. "Are you serious? Tell me—you went—Concha paid you to go up on the cliff and signal someone? When? How? Tell me!"

"Yassuh, Mistuh Shot, she sho' does. I gits a quarter every now an' then from her. I has to climb up there over the house—way up there, see?" The lad pointed to the great cliff that loomed behind them almost frighteningly in the night. "It's a heap of fun. I waves a old white sheet (as she tell me to, an' at night I builds a fire and waves a blanket in front of it. But I don't rightly make no puffs (as what you and Miss Lorena tell about. If you could show me how you all—"

Lorena interrupted him.

"But whom did you signal, Midnight? What messages did you send?"

"I nevuh asked nobody, ma'am. Miz Gonzales, she nevuh say."

"Concha's gone!" Sally Brazee exclaimed. "She left right after Shot came in with the news, I declare! She took her children. She wasn't here to help at supper and I couldn't find her anywhere!"

The deductions were obvious. Midnight's chance revelation opened the discussion anew, excited interesting talk on every side. It became plain to all of them that Concha, the cook, was one of Escobar's hirelings, the ranch spy who had confounded the American fighting men. By her simple act of climbing to the cliff top and signaling to Escobar's outposts on distant observation points, or of having Midnight do it, she could keep Escobar informed reasonably well of the ranch men's movements. Perhaps, too, she had other means of sending messages to the bandit leader's camp. Everybody had a speculation about it, it seemed.

"I declare," said Sally Brazee, tremulously, when it all became clear to her, "I've got to go inside and have a good cry! Lorena, you want to come in now?"

Lorena did not answer.

A few people looked around, but Lorena wasn't in sight, and presently a cowboy explained, "Her and Shot, they walked up towards the windmill, Miss Sally."

The men all smiled, and Sally went inside, and George Brazee said: "Well, boys, I reckon we'll have to arrange another dance celebration since you finally caught Escobar, so let's get some sleep in now."

But young Midnight, the black boy, slipped off into the shadow of night.

Only the black orphan, therefore, saw or heard the highly personal little drama there where the pumped water ran. And he didn't understand most of it.

"—and so we just couldn't help suspecting him, Shot!" Lorena was saying. "But for Uncle George and Aunt Sally's sake, as well as his own, I'm glad Jerry was innocent. Let's never mention it."

"I reckon I owe him an apology for thinking he might be a spy," Shot murmured.

"No. You had every right to suspect him. You and I. But we didn't tell him so. Jerry's just conceited. And lucky—it was his luck that enabled him to see Escobar's men raiding at the Hump. Concha did some expert spying for Escobar that time, too."

"I brought you Escobar's sword, Lorena. For a souvenir."

"I'll love it! And Shot—Jerry proposed to me today!"

"Good lordy!" exclaimed Shot, turning quickly to face her. "Why, I—why, Lorena, I been planning to do that myself!"

"So?"

"Why, yes, ma'am! Honest to gosh, Lorena, I—" the young man swallowed hard. "Say, you told him 'no,' didn't you? You didn't encourage him none—any?"

He had grasped Lorena's shoulders and was shaking them a little now in the stress he felt. Lorena wished she could see his face. Shot blushed so easily!

"I told him I wasn't ready to be married yet," she said.

"Why, Lorena—Lorena! I—why, honey girl! I had been hoping—I—honestly—oh, lord, Lorena, I love you so much I'm about crazy! I've loved you since you got off the train in Blanco, so help me I have! You—we've been through a lot of things out here, but—Lorenia, I ain't—I mean I'm not worth a hang, really. I haven't got anything to speak of. But I'll get $2,000 reward money—it's rightly yours—can't you figure maybe—?"

"Shot, you are hurting my shoulders!"

"—maybe you didn't mean what you told Dale? I aim to settle down, Honest I do! You—we—there's some good ranch land to be had cheap now—look, Lorena, I'll be good to you—I promise! I'll break my back working. I'll—shy, honey girl—!" The earnest young man was trembling a little.

Lorena exhaled deeply, then moved in very close to him and rested her head on his breast and reached one slender arm around him to pat him on the shoulder.

Shot kissed her hungrily, and was exalted by the ardor with which she kissed him back.

"Whoo-weeee!" breathed little black Midnight, from the shadows below the windmill.

(The End)

Lorena exhaled deeply, then moved in very close to him.

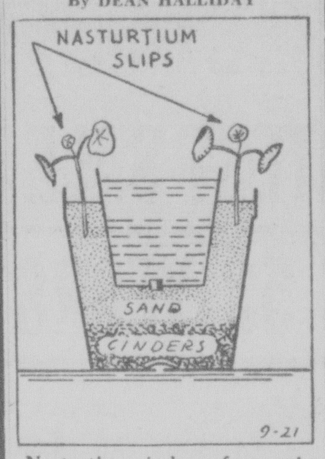
Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY



Nasturtiums indoors from outdoor plants

To succeed in having nasturtiums for continued bloom indoors, either plant seeds in a flower pot or develop new plants from cuttings. These cuttings should be taken from the outdoor plants now before they are damaged by frost.

Nasturtium cuttings can be rooted in a five-inch pot. Use either sand, or sand and peat as a rooting medium. In the center of the larger pot set a 2½-inch flower pot full of water, as shown in the above Garden-Graph. The opening in the bottom of the smaller pot must be closed, of course, with a cork. Keep the cuttings shaded until root growth starts. The slips will root in about five days. When good root growth has developed they can be re-potted in a not-too-rich soil mixture.

Use the tips of new shoots only. These should be from three to four inches long. Remove the flower buds, as they will use up the energy which should go to forming roots. Do not put the cuttings in water before planting as this interferes with the callus which forms over the cut surface.

Foreheads in the Open

* * * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

FOREHEADS remain uncurtained; only a few of the pretty dollies wear fringes. And, alas! foreheads are not always what they should be. The eyebrow lifters put railroad tracks across them. The petulant ones etch themselves with frown lines. Werry sad.

The woman who looks into her mirror and observes a brow that is out of form had better start a better-forehead campaign, and not take her time about it either. Wrinkles get a firm foothold in the course of the years, affecting not only the skin and tissues, but the underlying fibers, digging gullies in them. Catch 'em young and maybe you'll get the best of them.

Mind your facial manners. Don't make facial gestures. No sense doing acrobatics with your features. Let the eyes provide expression; they do the job effectively.

After washing the face at bed time, spread on a heavy cream. Smooth the cross line with one finger-tip, sending it in tiny circles. Pick up the frowns, thumb at lower end, finger at the upper terminal; iron with the thumb. That movement forces the flesh out of the groove. While the cream remains on, go over the facial area with an ice cube. A minute or two of refrigerating speeds up the blood streams that give freshness and firmness to the flesh.

If the busy housewife, whose baby is up and chattering at five in the morning, wants to keep her good looks, and of course she does, she had better do a flop when the baby has his afternoon nap. Nothing is so devastating to attractive appearance as loss of sleep.

Many young mothers go wilty during the first year of the first baby, lose freshness of eyes and complexion, let their figures get sloppy. It won't do. Baby must have attention, but mother should not neglect herself. Isn't fair to her, the baby or the papa-person. Anxiety and loss of sleep will make her look like a grand old wreck.

February is the only month that is shorter than the lunar cycle. For this reason, about every six years the months has only three of the four phases. This means, of course, that sometimes February is without a new moon, one of the two quarters phases, or a full moon.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Foreheads in the Open

* * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

FOREHEADS remain uncurtained; only a few of the pretty dollies wear fringes. And, alas! foreheads are not always what they should be. The eyebrow lifters put railroad tracks across them. The petulant ones etch themselves with frown lines. Werry sad.

The woman who looks into her mirror and observes a brow that is out of form had better start a better-forehead campaign, and not take her time about it either. Wrinkles get a firm foothold in the course of the years, affecting not only the skin and tissues, but the underlying fibers, digging gullies in them. Catch 'em young and maybe you'll get the best of them.

Mind your facial manners. Don't make facial gestures. No sense doing acrobatics with your features. Let the eyes provide expression; they do the job effectively.

After washing the face at bed time, spread on a heavy cream. Smooth the cross line with one finger-tip, sending it in tiny circles. Pick up the frowns, thumb at lower end, finger at the upper terminal; iron with the thumb. That movement forces the flesh out of the groove. While the cream remains on, go over the facial area with an ice cube. A minute or two of refrigerating speeds up the blood streams that give freshness and firmness to the flesh.

If the busy housewife, whose baby is up and chattering at five in the morning, wants to keep her good looks, and of course she does, she had better do a flop when the baby has his afternoon nap. Nothing is so devastating to attractive appearance as loss of sleep.

Many young mothers go wilty during the first year of the first baby, lose freshness of eyes and complexion, let their figures get sloppy. It won't do. Baby must have attention, but mother should not neglect herself. Isn't fair to her, the baby or the papa-person. Anxiety and loss of sleep will make her look like a grand old wreck.

February is the only month that is shorter than the lunar cycle. For this reason, about every six years the months has only three of the four phases. This means, of course, that sometimes February is without a new moon, one of the two quarters phases, or a full moon.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

More Exact Idea Can Be Gained from Punctures

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In a report on Medical Progress in the New England Journal of Medicine, Professor Dameshek, of Boston's Tufts Medical School, picks the following as the most important advances in diseases of the blood:

(1) Examination of the bone marrow. The blood is very much easier to study than most other organs, because all you have to do is to make a pin prick in the end of the finger or the lobe of the ear, draw a drop of blood out on the slide, stain it and look at it under a microscope. That is what diagnosticians have been doing for forty or fifty years. And they have learned a lot.

But the circulating blood, which is what you study that way, is conditioned by the bone marrow, because it is in the bone marrow that the circulating blood cells originate. A few years ago a method was devised by which some bone marrow can be obtained for microscopical study. The bone selected is the breast bone. A small cut is made in the skin and a special needle goes through the bone plate and whips out a piece of marrow for inspection. The operation does not hurt any more or as much as the drilling of a tooth and is perefectly harmless.

Firmly Established

It has become firmly established as a method of studying blood diseases. A much more exact idea of what is going on can be gained from these marrow punctures—whether the blood is regenerating or degenerating and which cells are involved.

So if your doctor proposes to suck some of your sternal marrow out, don't object. It is all in the interests of science.

(2) The number of different forms of chronic anemia described since the revival in interest in treating anemia, following the discovery of the beneficial effect of liver extract in pernicious anemia.

Most important of the new forms is chronic anemia, due to the state of chronic iron deficiency.

Iron is needed in definite quantity in the diet to stimulate the bone marrow in the production of healthy blood cells. If iron is deficient, the product is inferior. The red blood cells are smaller than normally, and do not contain the proper amount of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin. This leads to impaired nutrition, with flattened finger-nails, graying hair, wrinkled facial skin and sores at the corners of the mouth.

Usually in Women

The condition appears most usually in women, and in women of the lower income groups. The diet of this group tends to be deficient in iron and repeated pregnancies further deplete the body iron, leading to the condition of chronic anemia.

A definite practical warning concerns women of the higher income groups who manage to get themselves in this condition by going on freak diets. The last victim of this kind I saw had fervently embraced the separate carbohydrate and protein nonsense, and thought she felt fine and was in good health until it was found that her blood cells contained about half the iron she needed.

The only treatment is to increase the iron in the diet, by the direct use of iron in the form of medicine, if necessary.

Questions and Answers

B. M.: "What is your opinion in connection with radium to shrink an enlarged thymus gland?"

Answer: I have never heard of radium being used for this purpose. Under X-ray the thymus disappears, but I doubt if radium rays would penetrate that far.

Bone Marrow Is Aid in Learning Blood Diseases

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In a report on Medical Progress in the New England Journal of Medicine, Professor Dameshek, of Boston's Tufts Medical School, picks the following as the most important advances in diseases of the blood:

(1) Examination of the bone marrow. The blood is very much easier to study than most other organs, because all you have to do is to make a pin prick in the end of the finger or the lobe of the ear, draw a drop of blood out on the slide, stain it and look at it under a microscope. That is what diagnosticians have been doing for forty or fifty years. And they have learned a lot.

But the circulating blood, which is what you study that way, is conditioned by the bone marrow, because it is in the bone marrow that the circulating blood cells originate. A few years ago a method was devised by which some bone marrow can be obtained for microscopical study. The bone selected is the breast bone. A small cut is made in the skin and a special needle goes through the bone plate and whips out a piece of marrow for inspection. The operation does not hurt any more or as much as the drilling of a tooth and is perefectly harmless.

Firmly Established

It has become firmly established as a method of studying blood diseases. A much more exact idea of what is going on can be gained from these marrow punctures—whether the blood is regenerating or degenerating and which cells are involved.

So if your doctor proposes to suck some of your sternal marrow out, don't object. It is all in the interests of science.

(2) The number of different forms of chronic anemia described since the revival in interest in treating anemia, following the discovery of the beneficial effect of liver extract in pernicious anemia.

Most important of the new forms is chronic anemia, due to the state of chronic iron deficiency.

Iron is needed in definite quantity in the diet to stimulate the bone marrow in the production of healthy blood cells. If iron is deficient, the product is inferior. The red blood cells are smaller than normally, and do not contain the proper amount of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin. This leads to impaired nutrition, with flattened finger-nails, graying hair, wrinkled facial skin and sores at the corners of the mouth.

Usually in Women

The condition appears most usually in women, and in women of the lower income groups. The diet of this group tends to be deficient in iron and repeated pregnancies further deplete the body iron, leading to the condition of chronic anemia.

A definite practical warning concerns women of the higher income groups who manage to get themselves in this condition by going on freak diets. The last victim of this kind I saw had fervently embraced the separate carbohydrate and protein nonsense, and thought she felt fine and was in good health until it was found that her blood cells contained about half the iron she needed.

The only treatment is to increase the iron in the diet, by the direct use of iron in the form of medicine, if necessary.

Questions and Answers

B. M.: "What is your opinion in connection with radium to shrink an enlarged thymus gland?"

Answer: I have never heard of radium being used for this purpose. Under X-ray the thymus disappears, but I doubt if radium rays would penetrate that far.

Stocks Irregular as Speculators Stampede To Cash In on Profits

Many Unwilling to Hold Shares Pending Decision on Neutrality

New York, Sept. 20. (AP)—A drive to put the war stocks into new high ground was stemmed today by the haste of many speculators to cash paper profits before the neutrality fight opens in Congress.

Leading steels, motors, rail equipments, chemicals and other current favorites were up ¼ to about 4 in early trading. Persistent offerings from traders following the day-to-day developments on the war fronts whittled down the gains, leaving the list somewhat irregular at the finish.

Final prices were only fractionally higher for United States steel, General Motors, Goodyear, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott copper, Santa Fe and U. S. rubber. Small net declines were posted in Youngstown sheet, Chrysler, General Electric, Anaconda and New York Central.

The volume, heavy at the outset, totaled 2,141,690 shares compared with 1,832,630 yesterday. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks held unchanged at 62.4.

In the Curb market, further advances were recorded for American Cyanamid "B", Lockheed Aircraft, E. W. Bliss and Colt's Patent Fire Arms. Moderately lower were Electric Bond & Share, Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin and Pantepec oil.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP) — Wheat prices shot up as much as 3⅝ cents today but then tumbled back again, losing all or most of the early gains.

War inspired purchasing, which caught the pit with few selling orders at the opening, caused the sharp upturn.

When high prices of 87⅞ and 89½ for December and May contracts were reached, however, many traders rushed to take profits. The close was ⅛ lower to ¾ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish. December 85⅝-⅞, May 86½-⅝; corn closed ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher, December 54⅛-⅜, May 57⅛-⅝; oats ¼-⅜ higher; rye ¼-½ down and lard 5 to 8 higher.

Foreign Exchanges

New York, Sept. 20 (AP) — Foreign government dollar bonds achieved something spectacular in the way of doing today.

When the final gong rang, their average in the Associated Press index was at its lowest point in seven years — since June 1, 1932. The figure was 42.2, compared with 57.1 only a month ago.

Holders of the foreign securities apparently were still unloading because of the recent turn of events in the European war.

Heaviness marked U. S. treasuries, which declined on an average of about 1-2 point, thereby losing most, if not all, the gains achieved in three previous sessions.

Many corporate issues, with accent on rails, recorded further gains.

Transactions totaled $13,399,825, face value, compared with $10,038,600 yesterday.

Pittsburgh Produce

Pittsburgh, Sept. 20. (AP)—(U. S. and Pa. Dept. Agr.)—Produce demand moderate.

"Buttered lightly, the plain bread may be filled with healthful cheese, cold meat or fish, chopped vegetables, crisp bacon, jelly, jam or peanut butter. Toast the slices and let them get quite dry and spread with cold mashed vegetables so essential to the child's diet. The crunchy bread and soft filling make a pleasant combination. Cut each slice of bread in four strips and french-fry them, sprinkling with grated cheese while still hot; boy or girl will love this treat—and it's a pleasant change from sandwiches occasionally."

Stocks Irregular as Speculators Stampede To Cash In on Profits

Many Unwilling to Hold Shares Pending Decision on Neutrality

New York, Sept. 20. (AP)—A drive to put the war stocks into new high ground was stemmed today by the haste of many speculators to cash paper profits before the neutrality fight opens in Congress.

Leading steels, motors, rail equipments, chemicals and other current favorites were up ½ to about 4 in early trading. Persistent offerings from traders following the day-to-day developments on the war fronts whittled down the gains, leaving the list somewhat irregular at the finish.

Final prices were only fractionally higher for United States steel, General Motors, Goodyear, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott copper, Santa Fe and U. S. rubber. Small net declines were posted in Youngstown sheet, Chrysler, General Electric, Anaconda and New York Central.

The volume, heavy at the outset, totaled 2,141,690 shares compared with 1,832,630 yesterday. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks held unchanged at 62.4.

In the Curb market, further advances were recorded for American Cyanamid "B", Lockheed Aircraft, E. W. Bliss and Colt's Patent Fire Arms. Moderately lower were Electric Bond & Share, Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin and Pantepec oil.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP) — Wheat prices shot up as much as 3⅝ cents today but then tumbled back again, losing all or most of the early gains.

War inspired purchasing, which caught the pit with few selling orders at the opening, caused the sharp upturn.

When high prices of 87⅞ and 89½ for December and May contracts were reached, however, many traders rushed to take profits. The close was ⅛ lower to ⅝ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish. December 85⅝-⅞, May 86⅛-⅝; corn closed ⅛ lower to ⅝ higher, December 54⅛-⅜, May 57⅛-⅝; oats ¼-⅜ higher; rye ¼-½ down and lard 5 to 8 higher.

Foreign Exchanges

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Foreign government dollar bonds achieved something spectacular in the way of closing today.

When the final gong rang, their average in the Associated Press index was at its lowest point in seven years — since June 1, 1932. The figure was 42.2, compared with 57.1 only a month ago.

Holders of the foreign securities apparently were still unloading because of the recent turn of events in the European war.

Heaviness marked U. S. treasuries, which declined on an average of about 1-2 point, thereby losing most, if not all, the gains achieved in three previous sessions.

Many corporate issues, with accent on rails, recorded further gains.

Discuss International Law

se present asserted there was discussion as to whether in- tional law, if it were adopted basis of United States policy, be supplemented by minor ory provisions, penalizing cit- who disobeyed orders against ing on belligerent ships.

ed M. Landon was reported ve advised the chief execu- hat his views on the neutrality ion had been fully outlined press conference this morning. on also expressed the opin- that Congress should remain uously in session as long as is war in Europe.

Roosevelt, the conferees said, expressed the belief that it d not require more than two ssibly three weeks for Con- to act on neutrality legisla- He added that it would be ble, if Congress acted and ly adjourned, for the ma- and minority leaders in both s to remain in Washington rise with the administration eutrality policy.

Roosevelt's Message Today

Roosevelt said that suggestion be included in his message joint session of Congress to- w, it was reported. The chief tive did not say exactly what ould suggest regarding legis- in tomorrow's message.

the conclusion of the con- e, Mr. Roosevelt was said to advised the group that a ent should be issued on be- f all. He wrote out this state- in his own handwriting, and passed it around for sugges- some minor changes were and the statement was given porters later by Stephen Early, House secretary.

statement said:

"The conference, with unan- ous thought, discussed the mary objective of keeping the ited States neutral and at e. There was complete ac- d that in congressional and cutive action, the whole sub- and its many ramifications dealt with in a wholly non- tisan spirit.

"It was made clear that the t important subject is the al of the embargo and a rn to the processes of in- national law.

"Finally, the conference dis- sed the methods of dealing h the six points relating to ricans traveling on belliger- ships, cash and carry, etc.

"It was the consensus of opin- that the Senate committee foreign relations take up the slation as soon after the gress convenes as possible."

s utterance immediately raised question whether, as has been ed, the president would ask special session convening to- w to do away with the neu- act in its entirety and thus America's position in a war- world rest upon the establish- inciples of international law.

Contradictory View

wever, another passage in the ment appeared to contradict view of what Mr. Roosevelt propose. The passage told of nferees' efforts to deal with x individual war-time prob- covered by a six-point program dministration put forward at st congressional session.

e possible explanation was that Roosevelt would ask for repeal l or most of the neutrality and that the conference talked w America could be protected the six dangers involved on a of international law. Another hat the statement was made ely ambiguous in the presi- desire not to disclose his am in advance of the message be plans to deliver in person joint session of Congress to- w afternoon.

enunciated in July by Secre- Hull, the administration's pro- gram called for repeal of the embargo clause of the neutrality act and the enactment of the following six-point program:

"(1) To prohibit American ships from entering combat area.

"(2) To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas.

"(3) To require that exports of goods from the United States to belligerent countries shall be preceded by the transfer of title to the foreign purchasers.

"(4) To continue the existing restrictions on loans and credits to belligerent nations.

"(5) To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents.

"(6) To continue the National Munitions Control Board and the licensing system with respect to the importation and exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war."

Mr. Hull said a few days ago that, fundamentally, he was still standing on that program.

Republicans at Congress

In addition to the Republican leadership in Congress, the meeting brought to the president's office Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, the Republican party's presidential and vice presidential candidates in 1936.

Mr. Roosevelt sat at his desk, with Secretary Hull seated at his left and somewhat to the rear. Most of the rest sat in a semicircle in front of the desk, with an overflow of three senators on a green sofa nearby.

The others who attended were: Vice President Garner, Speager Bankhead, Senator Barkley (D-Ky) and Senator McNary (R-Ore), the majority and minority leaders in the Senate; Senators Minton (D-Ind) and Austin (R-Vt), the assistant leaders, Representatives Rayburn (D-Tex) and Martin (R-Mass), the party leaders in the House, Senator Pittman (D-Nev) and Rep. Bloom (D-NY), chairman of the Senate and House committees on foreign affairs, Senator Byrnes (D-SC) and Rep. Mapes (R-Mich), ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee.

Early read the joint statement to reporters crowded into his office and then briefly answered questions.

Replies to Questions

"Does this mean that a new bill will be drafted or that the bill now before the committee (the Bloom Bill passed by the House last session) will be used?"

"It will be the purpose of the chairman of the committee to strike out of the bill now pending before the committee all after the enacting clause and substitute whatever bill the committee as a whole may draft."

"Was everyone in favor of repealing the embargo?"

"We must have a bill before us before anyone can be for or against anything."

"Was there opposition to repeal?"

"It was agreed that the members of the conference would issue this statement and stand on it, and if they entered that agreement I think I should not go beyond it."

"Did the president think progress had been made? Was he gratified?"

"Decidedly."

The conferees were secretive about what took place, referring questioners to the formal statement. However, Bankhead called the meeting "very reassuring."

Landon Changes View

Landon told reporters that although he had expressed opposition to the embargo several weeks ago, the war had broken out since that time.

"This makes a change in the situation," he said. "The effect of which must be exhaustively considered and debated by the Congress, along with the other features of the neutrality act."

He declined to say specifically whether he now favored retaining the embargo.

Rep. Martin said he was taking no position on the embargo issue until it comes to a vote in the House.

"Things are happening too fast to predict in advance what will be best for the United States," he said.

Without the embargo, markets would be open to all belligerents alike, but only England and France could buy, because of the British fleet's command of the seas.

Strong Group Opposed

The group in Congress which traditionally has opposed any American involvement in the affairs of Europe is deeply opposed to such action.

It argues that repealing the embargo would be an act so favorable to the allies that German hostility would be aroused. Eventually, it contends, this hostility would be expressed in such a way that the United States would be drawn into the war.

Administration men hold that the neutral thing to do would be to repeal the restriction. Its existence on the statute books makes America un-neutral, they say, because it robs England of the advantage to be derived from its navy. In effect, one such official has said, the embargo gives Germany the equivalent of an Atlantic fleet.

Beyond these arguments, a third group contends the issues of the war abroad are of such a nature that, although America must keep out of the war, she cannot be blind to Germany's acts. The embargo should be repealed, it holds, so that the allies by buying weapons here may more effectively resist such acts. The embargo should be repealed, it holds, so that the allies by buying weapons here may more effectively resist such acts.

These things, roughly, were the considerations obviously present in th epresident's office today.

Man Snags 140 Trout At New Germany Dam In Record Catch

Grantsville, Sept. 20 —Many an appreciative eye glistened yesterday at the New Germany dam as spectators saw a record catch of 140 brown trout.

But those beautiful fish went into no elated fisherman's basket. The catch was made by District Forest Warden Mathew Martin who had the job of transplanting the beauties into nother pond.

Later, some 200 more beauts, including rainbow and speckled trout, were caught.

The dam was drained to enable workmen to repair the breast of the dam and to remove stumps. The trout were caught as they came shooting through flood pipes.

The fish measured from sixteen to twenty inches.

"(3) To require that exports of goods from the United States to belligerent countries shall be preceded by the transfer of title to the foreign purchasers.

"(4) To continue the existing restrictions on loans and credits to belligerent nations.

Remedy Is Obvious One of Prevention, Expert Advises

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"I am writing for advice concerning my five-year-old daughter," says a letter just received.

"Two months ago she began having bad dreams at night two hours after going to sleep. Every muscle in her body grows tense and she cries and calls for 'mamma.' It is very difficult to awaken her. Washing her face with cold water has little effect. She is very incoherent, says very little except 'mamma,' and what she says makes no sense except that she generally points ahead of her and says, 'look!' at least once in the episode.

"As soon as she is thoroughly awake, about five minutes, she yawns very hard and expresses a wish to go to sleep. She remembers absolutely nothing of the occurrence. She sleeps well the remainder of the night and feels no apparent effect the following day. This does not occur every night but is happening more frequently of late, and she is becoming more difficult to awaken."

Hundreds of Others

This mother's description might be that of hundreds of young children, though not nearly all night terrors so clearly express fears as does this child's. Our three children had similar experiences. Their eyes would at times be open as wide as a rabbit's, but they would not be awake. We always went to them in such distress, as does this mother. Sometimes the child would not awaken until he was walked, but he would usually respond to a cold sponge or cloth on the hands and face.

I remember that one of our children had several terrors on the same night. On the advice of our pediatrician, the child was given an enema with good results, indicating, perhaps, some digestive disturbance.

To our first child, when we did not know any better, we read any stories that he liked, and the more gruesome they were the better he liked them. His terrors consisted of living through some of these atrocious stories.

Days To Exciting

Sometimes he, and more often the next two children, would have a night terror following a very exciting day, even though it would be a very happy day. We soon found that by controlling the child's excitement during the day, the night terrors could be greatly reduced or proctically prevented.

A great many parents are writing and telling me that their children, from 6 to 12, are having night terrors and frightful dreams that carry over from the exciting and hair-raising radio programs they listen to. No wonder! Have you seen these youngsters lean over the radio, gnawing their nails and all keyed up, with nearly every muscle strained? Parents who care will protect the sensitive nervous system of their growing children by forbidding them to turn the dial to these programs.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you let a tot jump up and down on your stuffed furniture?

A. I would not. He would get instant pain on his bare bottom for the first and every subsequent offense. Oh! I might warn him once. After that I would warm him.

To All Consumers:

A Frank Discussion on Food Supplies, Prices and Profits

Disturbed political, economic and social conditions abroad have repercussions in the United States which have been reflected in confused, and perhaps, hasty action by many people. We feel that our obligation to our customers and to all consumers at such a time goes beyond the function of buying and distributing of a wide variety of dependable quality products at reasonable prices.

We believe consumers are entitled to our appraisal of facts and to an expression of opinion.

HERE ARE THE FACTS AS WE SEE THEM:—

1. There has been an increased—even if temporary — demand for certain food products by some consumers.
2. Supplies of food in our country, however, are not only adequate but appear to be abundant, as pointed out by the Secretary of Agriculture.
3. Prices of some products which have been selling below cost of production have moved upward.
4. Prices of some other products have increased because of temporary disturbances in shipping facilities or source of supply.

Advanced consumer buying as a precaution against food shortages would appear to be unnecessary at this time.

Increased prices due to speculation and desire to obtain abnormal profits are unjustifiable.

These conditions and developments prompt American Stores Company publicly to express its policy and position. The American Stores Company assures its customers and all consumers that retail price increases will be made only where higher costs necessitate . . . that low profit ratios will be maintained . . . that the spread between the price the producer receives and the price the consumer pays will be kept as narrow as possible by efficient distribution and honest dealing with the public . . . that, as in the past, every effort will be made to maintain adequate stocks of dependable merchandise at fair prices.

Our stores will continue diligently to serve the needs and desires of consumers economically, efficiently and honestly.

Remedy Is Obvious One of Prevention, Expert Advises

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"I am writing for advice concerning my five-year-old daughter," says a letter just received.

"Two months ago she began having bad dreams at night two hours after going to sleep. Every muscle in her body grows tense and she cries and calls for 'mamma.' It is very difficult to awaken her. Washing her face with cold water has little effect. She is very incoherent, says very little except 'mamma,' and what she says makes no sense except that she generally points ahead of her and says, 'look!' at least once in the episode.

"As soon as she is thoroughly awake, about five minutes, she yawns very hard and expresses a wish to go to sleep. She remembers absolutely nothing of the occurrence. She sleeps well the remainder of the night and feels no apparent effect the following day. This does not occur every night but is happening more frequently of late, and she is becoming more difficult to awaken."

Hundreds of Others

This mother's description might be that of hundreds of young children, though not nearly all night terrors so clearly express fears as does this child's. Our three children had similar experiences. Their eyes would at times be open as wide as a rabbit's, but they would not be awake. We always went to them in such distress, as does this mother. Sometimes the child would not awaken until he was walked, but he would usually respond to a cold sponge or cloth on the hands and face.

I remember that one of our children had several terrors on the same night. On the advice of our pediatrician, the child was given an enema with good results, indicating, perhaps, some digestive disturbance.

To our first child, when we did not know any better, we read any stories that he liked, and the more gruesome they were the better he liked them. His terrors consisted of living through some of these atrocious stories.

Days To Exciting

Sometimes he, and more often the next two children, would have a night terror following a very exciting day, even though it would be a very happy day. We soon found that by controlling the child's excitement during the day, the night terrors could be greatly reduced or proctically prevented.

A great many parents are writing and telling me that their children, from 6 to 12, are having night terrors and frightful dreams that carry over from the exciting and hair-raising radio programs they listen to. No wonder! Have you seen these youngsters lean over the radio, gnawing their nails and all keyed up, with nearly every muscle strained? Parents who care will protect the sensitive nervous system of their growing children by forbidding them to turn the dial to these programs.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you let a tot jump up and down on your stuffed furniture?

A. I would not. He would get instant pain on his bare bottom for the first and every subsequent offense. Oh! I might warn him once. After that I would warm him.

Pigeon Club Race

Frostburg, Sept. 20. — The Algonquin Racing Pigeon Club Sunday flew the third race of the young bird series, a distance of 150 miles from Parkersburg, W. Va.

Two hundred thirty-nine birds were entered. The weather was fair at the time the birds were released but as the birds neared home they encountered a low-hanging fog above which many bird-hawks were hovering, and as a result many fine pigeons were killed.

The next race will be flown Sunday from Chillicothe, O.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Sept. 20. (AP)—Professor Larry MacPhail's portable college of agriculture, established to train farmhands for the far-flung Brooklyn Minor League acreages, will open in two sections Oct. 2 and will continue until the school runs out of pupils or the pupils run out of the school.

Baseball schools are not new, but Professor MacPhail's baseball-in-three-easy-lessons is distinctly an innovation.

Professor MacPhail is not a man to do things by halves. He figured that if a baseball school operated successfully in the fall or the spring, it should operate successfully all winter.

Naturally the school isn't conducted by the Dodgers. That would be against the rules, and Professor MacPhail has been known to respect all rules.

Inasmuch as the Dodgers can't conduct the schools, they are sponsored by the farm clubs, to wit: Dayton, Pine Bluff, Americus, Olean and Elmira. And if any promising student wakes up next spring and finds himself in a Brooklyn uniform it will be a remarkable coincidence.

Anyway, the Dodgers aren't going to have just one or two schools, but ten yet, and after those have run their course a series of classes will be conducted in California to brush up on odds and ends, such as the proper way to steal second with the bases filled and other Brooklyn tactics.

Two groups of minor league managers and Brooklyn coaches and scouts will conduct the classes, and probably it's just a coincidence that the advance men, Ed Smith, Jr., business manager of the Pine Bluff, Ark., club, and Mickey McConnell, who has the same job at Dayton, are left handers.

One group will open at Fond Du Lac, Wis., and progressively hold classes at Ottumwa, Iowa, Wichita, Kas., Pueblo, Colo., and Phoenix, Ariz. The other group starts at Grand Rapids, Mich., and takes in Muncie, Ind., Nashville, Tenn., Baton Rouge, La., and Waco, Tex.

This schedule ends the first week in November, after which the California winter program gets under way.

There probably never has been a winter program quite like it, but then, too, there never has been a baseball man quite like Professor MacPhail, who combines showmanship with one of the shrewdest baseball brains in the nation.

He meshed the gears to start the Cincinnati Reds toward their present high position, and this year he has a Brooklyn club that may finish in third place after practically all critics had picked it to finish, by great perseverance, on the last day of the season.

The professor has plenty on the ball, but that's only the half of it. He's going to develop some pitchers that do too.

Series Ticket Demand Snows Under Red Club

Cincinnati, Sept. 20 (AP) — No sooner had the Cincinnati baseball club announced yesterday that World Series reservations were receivable than lines formed in banks all over town to satisfy a requirement that only bank-certified checks would be accepted.

"We're snowed under," reported one banker as he scanned a line reaching from his deck to the door.

Conceding that "the National League pennant race has not yet been decided," the baseball club announced that $16.95 would buy one ticket to each of three games that may be played here on the heels of two in New York. If the fifth game is unnecessary, the club will refund a proportionate part of the money "after the Series."

Tickets will be limited to two to a customer.

Box seats "are priced at $20.40 per strip of three," said the announcement, but added quickly:

"None will be available to the general public because the supply will have been exhausted by allotments to season box holders, players, visiting clubs, other baseball clubs, press and officials."

Wertz Shoots Hole-In-One At F. C. Links

The first hole-in-one of the season at the Fort Cumberland Golf Club was fired several days ago by Raymond G. "Chuck" Wertz, manager of the Prichard Corporation here.

Wertz, playing with Dan R. Staley, bagged his ace on No. 10, one of the Oldtown Road course's most difficult holes despite its comparatively short 150 yards. It takes an almost perfect shot over a high bank and between trees to reach the green.

Nittany Lions Ready for 1939 Grid Campaign

Coach Robert Higgins Believes Team Will Be Improved

State College, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP)—The Nittany Lion is sharpening his claws and growling a bit in preparation for the football hunting season opening October 7 at Penn State.

While not wanting to commit himself to "anything very definite" Coach Robert Higgins believes Penn State will go hunting with a "pretty fair football team this year."

Penn State last year won three games, tied one and lost four—three of them by whopping margins. But that doesn't discourage Coach Higgins. Listen to him:

"We're pretty encouraged over the outlook up in the mountain country. Our boys were mailed a pair of football shoes this summer with instructions to wear them a while every day. That means no sore feet in September and every coach knows what a help that will be."

Besides easing the Lion's feet, Higgins himself has been relieved of the usual graduation headache.

Only eight seniors were lost this spring and a higher caliber reserve squad than usual is ready to take up the load.

"Watch state's regular ends this year—Captain Spike Alter and Tom Vargo," he exulted. "And watch Chuck Peters, our fancy running number four.

"Our backs should be good, our tackles husky and fairly plentiful, and this means a lot to a Warner system team."

At least three sophomores are considered varsity material. They are William R. Smaltz, fullback from Aliquippa, Pa.; Leonard L. Prketich, tackle from Fayette City, Pa.; and Mike Garbinski, guard from Johnstown, Pa.

Higgins was particularly enthusiastic about Chuck Peters who took the heart out of Syracuse in a 33 to 6 victory last season "with his brilliant open field stepping."

For the 1939 team Higgins has several good veterans for every post. They include: Lloyd B. Ickes, fullback from Altoona, Pa.

The 1939 season pit Penn State against Bucknell at State College, Oct. 7; Lehigh at State College, October 14; Cornell at Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 21; Syracuse at Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 28; Maryland at State College, November 4; Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, November 11; Army at West Point, Nov. 18; and Pittsburgh at State College, Nov. 25.

Walters Scores Winning Run in Ninth on Goodman's Single

Reds Maintain Two and One Half Lead over St. Louis Cards

Cincinnati, Sept. 20 (AP)—Bucky Walters won his twenty-sixth hurling victory of the year and gave the Reds a ninth-innning 3 to 2 triumph over Philadelphia today.

Contrite after yesterday's 13 to 1 soaking at the hands of the cellar-dwellers, the Reds' vaunted hitting attack still missing but afield they rallied up Walters' six-hit performance in flawless fashion.

Lonnie Frey's tenth homer tied the score in the fifth after Morris Arnovich's fourth-frame circuit clout had put the Phils ahead, but aside from the third-inning rally resulting from Gus Suhr's error, proved all the Rhinelanders could do against the slants of "Boom Boom" Beck.

The break came when Walters, who usually potent bat silent through the day, came up to open the ninth. One of Beck's fast ones caught him between the shoulder blades and he took first. Werber sacrificed and Frey was deliberately passed.

Goodman carried Beck to the limit of two and two before rifling a single deep into center field to score his moundsman.

Frostburg, Sept. 20. — The Algonquin Racing Pigeon Club Sunday flew the third race of the young bird series, a distance of 150 miles from Parkersburg, W. Va.

Two hundred thirty-nine birds were entered. The weather was fair at the time the birds were released but as the birds neared home they encountered a low-hanging fog above which many bird-hawks were hovering, and as a result many fine pigeons were killed.

The next race will be flown Sunday from Chillicothe, O.

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Sept. 20. (AP)—Professor Larry MacPhail's portable college of agriculture, established to train farmhands for the far-flung Brooklyn Minor League acreages, will open in two sections Oct. 2 and will continue until the school runs out of pupils or the pupils run out of the school.

Baseball schools are not new, but Professor MacPhail's baseball-in-three-easy-lessons is distinctly an innovation.

Professor MacPhail is not a man to do things by halves. He figured that if a baseball school operated successfully in the fall or the spring, it should operate successfully all winter.

Naturally the school isn't conducted by the Dodgers. That would be against the rules, and Professor MacPhail has been known to respect all rules.

Inasmuch as the Dodgers can't conduct the schools, they are sponsored by the farm clubs, to wit: Dayton, Pine Bluff, Americus, Olean and Elmira. And if any promising student wakes up next spring and finds himself in a Brooklyn uniform it will be a remarkable coincidence.

Anyway, the Dodgers aren't going to have just one or two schools, but ten yet, and after those have run their course a series of classes will be conducted in California to brush up on odds and ends, such as the proper way to steal second with the bases filled and other Brooklyn tactics.

Two groups of minor league managers and Brooklyn coaches and scouts will conduct the classes, and probably it's just a coincidence that the advance men, Ed Smith, Jr., business manager of the Pine Bluff, Ark., club, and Mickey McConnell, who has the same job at Dayton, are left handers.

One group will open at Fond Du Lac, Wis., and progressively hold classes at Ottumwa, Iowa, Wichita, Kas., Pueblo, Colo., and Phoenix, Ariz. The other group starts at Grand Rapids, Mich., and takes in Muncie, Ind., Nashville, Tenn., Baton Rouge, La., and Waco, Tex.

This schedule ends the first week in November, after which the California winter program gets under way.

There probably never has been a winter program quite like it, but then, too, there never has been a baseball man quite like Professor MacPhail, who combines showmanship with one of the shrewdest baseball brains in the nation.

He meshed the gears to start the Cincinnati Reds toward their present high position, and this year he has a Brooklyn club that may finish in third place after practically all critics had picked it to finish, by great perseverance, on the last day of the season.

The professor has plenty on the ball, but that's only the half of it. He's going to develop some pitchers that do too.

Series Ticket Demand Snows Under Red Club

Cincinnati, Sept. 20 (AP) — No sooner had the Cincinnati baseball club announced yesterday that World Series reservations were receivable than lines formed in banks all over town to satisfy a requirement that only bank-certified checks would be accepted.

"We're snowed under," reported one banker as he scanned a line reaching from his deck to the door.

Conceding that "the National League pennant race has not yet been decided," the baseball club announced that $16.95 would buy one ticket to each of three games that may be played here on the heels of two in New York. If the fifth game is unnecessary, the club will refund a proportionate part of the money "after the Series."

Tickets will be limited to two to a customer.

Box seats "are priced at $20.40 per strip of three," said the announcement, but added quickly:

"None will be available to the general public because the supply will have been exhausted by allotments to season box holders, players, visiting clubs, other baseball clubs, press and officials."

Wertz Shoots Hole-In-One At F. C. Links

The first hole-in-one of the season at the Fort Cumberland Golf Club was fired several days ago by Raymond G. "Chuck" Wertz, manager of the Prichard Corporation here.

Wertz, playing with Dan R. Staley, bagged his ace on No. 10, one of the Oldtown Road course's most difficult holes despite its comparatively short 150 yards. It takes an almost perfect shot over a high bank and between trees to reach the green.

Nittany Lions Ready for 1939 Grid Campaign

Coach Robert Higgins Believes Team Will Be Improved

State College, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP)—The Nittany Lion is sharpening his claws and growling a bit in preparation for the football hunting season opening October 7 at Penn State.

While not wanting to commit himself to "anything very definite" Coach Robert Higgins believes Penn State will go hunting with a "pretty fair football team this year."

Penn State last year won three games, tied one and lost four—three of them by whopping margins. But that doesn't discourage Coach Higgins. Listen to him:

"We're pretty encouraged over the outlook up in the mountain country. Our boys were mailed a pair of football shoes this summer with instructions to wear them a while every day. That means no sore feet in September and every coach knows what a help that will be."

Besides easing the Lion's feet, Higgins himself has been relieved of the usual graduation headache.

Only eight seniors were lost this spring and a higher caliber reserve squad than usual is ready to take up the load.

"Watch state's regular ends this year—Captain Spike Alter and Tom Vargo," he exulted. "And watch Chuck Peters, our fancy running number four.

"Our backs should be good, our tackles husky and fairly plentiful, and this means a lot to a Warner system team."

At least three sophomores are considered varsity material. They are William R. Smaltz, fullback from Aliquippa, Pa.; Leonard L. Frketich, tackle from Fayette City, Pa.; and Mike Garbinski, guard from Johnstown, Pa.

Higgins was particularly enthusiastic about Chuck Peters who took the heart out of Syracuse in a 33 to 6 victory last season "with his brilliant open field stepping."

For the 1939 team Higgins has several good veterans for every post. They include: Lloyd B. Ickes, fullback from Altoona, Pa.

The 1939 season pit Penn State against Bucknell at State College Oct. 7; Lehigh at State College, October 14; Cornell at Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 21; Syracuse at Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 28; Maryland at State College, November 4; Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, November 11; Army at West Point, Nov. 18; and Pittsburgh at State College, Nov. 25.

Four Run Rally in Sixth Drives Casey from Mound

Victory Enabled Cards To Stay on Heels of League Leaders

St. Louis, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Cardinals' unconquerable spirit burst Brooklyn's bonds today with two furious rallies in the late innings for a 10 to 4 conquest that kept them still within 2½ games of the Cincinnati Reds.

For five innings Hugh Casey, the Dodgers' rookie star, held the Red Birds to three hits and one run—a homer by Don Gutteridge in the fourth—but with two out in the sixth the St. Louis sluggers forced across four runs on four hits and an error and in the eighth they got five more on five hits, including a home run by Stu Martin with two on.

Bowman got credit for his fourteenth victory and Casey was charged with the defeat, his tenth against thirteen victories.

Newcomers To Play For Blue Ridge

New Winsor, Md., Sept. 20. (AP)—A big, fast football team, liberally sprinkled with newcomers, will carry the hopes of Blue Ridge College into the season's opener against Drexel at Philadelphia this Saturday.

The probable lineup that Coach Frank Forstburg will start against Drexel has a line average 190 pounds and a backfield averaging 175 pounds.

Most of the first-string eleven, especially in the line, are newcomers, but the majority of them were high-school stars and are banked upon to come through for the "Vultures."

Spy Scare In Cincinnati Laid to Yankee Sleuths

By JOHN LARDNER
(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Sept. 20 — Spy scares have been paralyzing Cincinnati ever since Joseph V. McCarthy, head of the Eagle Eye Detective Agency (disguises a specialty), announced in a horse whisper that he was sending a secret operative west to scout the Reds.

Along the Ohio river, the citizens lock their doors at night and look under the bed before retiring. Every nook and cranny of the Reds' ball park has been searched for concealed speech-recording devices, and this week the police arrested an eavesdropper outside the clubhouse door just as he was dropping his eaves. He turned out to be a harmless local character who has dropped eaves in the neighborhood for twenty years, man and boy. He can't seem to keep hold of them. The cops dismissed him with a warning.

It is futile to attempt to detect a McCarthy spy in action, for Mr. McCarthy's system of disguise would baffle Sherlock Holmes. A good example is the case of Lefty Gomez, the intrepid Castilian sleuth, who was sent by McCarthy to scout the Giants for the world series on his day off a few years ago.

Shooting A Sinister Glance

Known in shadowing circles as Operative X-16, Gomez is a master of disguise. In this emergency he put on a pair of blue glasses and set forth with his well-thumbed copy of Steinfeldt's "Rules of Spying; or, What the Young Operative Should Know" under his arm. Lefty had been rereading the chapter on "How To Shoot Sinister Glances" that morning, and he was deeply impressed by what Steinfeldt, a specialist on this subject, had to say. You probably remember the passage:

"To shoot a sinister glance at long range, the naked eye is enough. A bushy eyebrow helps the effect"—Steinfeldt sold bushy eyebrows on the side—"and the young spy will soon learn to shoot sinister glances in two different directions at once. For close-range work, a pair of dark glasses, blue or green, is indispensable."

Steinfeldt did a small retail business in dark glasses. He goes on to say:

"I get great result myself by a sudden sharp look over the right shoulder. If the young secret agent gets a stiff neck at first from this device, because of lack of training, I recommend Steinfeldt's soothing neck liniment, in the small 25-cent bottle or the 50-cent jar. If a spy does not look sinister, what good is he" asks Steinfeldt, and goes on to answer his own question as follows: "No good at all."

Selecting a seat back of third base, Operative Gomez shot a sudden swift glance at Frank Snyder, coaching for the Giants, to try to steal a signal. Snyder promptly walked over to Gomez's seat, and X-16 pulled up his coat collar and huddled back to escape detection. His disguise was impenetrable.

Snyder Does Some Guessing

"Hello, Lefty," said Mr. Snyder affably. "Been having trouble with your eyes"

"He doesn't know me," whispered Gomez hoarsely to himself. "I think he's guessing."

"What's the matter?" pursued Mr. Snyder. "Have you got a cold?"

"No speak English," said Operative Gomez, as recommended by Steinfeldt in chapter VIII, 103-105, and 107-108, Ibid.

"Not very good, I admit," said Coach Snyder reassuringly, "but, if you polished up on your grammar, you would probably improve quite a bit."

Mr. Gomez made no comment, and the Giant coach returned to his post, saying "So long, Lefty. See you in the Series." There is absolutely no doubt in X-16's mind that Snyder made a game but useless bluff and had no idea he was really Gomez. No student of Steinfeldt has ever been detected in the act of espionage.

However, Mr. McCarthy is not using Gomez to stalk the Reds in Cincinnati because he never uses the same agent twice on the same kind of job. A beautiful woman with one eye is said to be representing the Yankees on this assignment, though another rumor has it that a Filipino valet has been planted close to Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds, to steal signals while pressing McKechnie's pants. McCarthy will neither affirm nor deny this report.

"You know my methods," said the head of the Eagle Eye Agency the other day. "I keep the enemy in the dark. Suffice it to say that the Reds are being scouted by one who has never failed me. We will call him Z-12."

McCarthy can call him Z-12 if he wants to, but I would like to assure the public that that is not his real name. Just another subterfuge.

Browns Defeat Red Sox 11 to 8 In 16 Innings

Three Run Rally Gives Cellar Dwellers a Victory

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP) —With darkness threatening to end the struggle as a tie, the St. Louis Browns hammered out three runs in the sixteenth inning tonight to take the longest game of the American League season from the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 8.

A double by Joe Gallagher and singles by Sam Harshany and Myril Hoag, together with a brace of sacrifices and an error by Fritz Ostermueller, the fourth and losing Sox pitcher, put the game on ice for the Browns. The Browns banged out twenty-two hits off the Sox pitchers, starting with Lefty Grove.

Pitching sparkling ball, Bob Harris gave the Sox only four hits over the last nine innings.

Four Run Rally in Sixth Drives Casey from Mound

Victory Enabled Cards To Stay on Heels of League Leaders

St. Louis, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Cardinals' unconquerable spirit burst Brooklyn's bonds today with two furious rallies in the late innings for a 10 to 4 conquest that kept them still within 2½ games of the Cincinnati Reds.

For five innings Hugh Casey, the Dodgers' rookie star, held the Red Birds to three hits and one run—a homer by Don Gutteridge in the fourth—but with two out in the sixth the St. Louis sluggers forced across four runs on four hits and an error and in the eighth they got five more on five hits, including a home run by Stu Martin with two on.

Bowman got credit for his fourteenth victory and Casey was charged with the defeat, his tenth against thirteen victories.

Newcomers To Play For Blue Ridge

New Winsor, Md., Sept. 20 (AP)—A big, fast football team, liberally sprinkled with newcomers, will carry the hopes of Blue Ridge College into the season's opener against Drexel at Philadelphia this Saturday.

The probable lineup that Coach Frank Forstburg will start against Drexel has a line average 190 pounds and a backfield averaging 175 pounds.

Most of the first-string eleven, especially in the line, are newcomers, but the majority of them were high-school stars and are banked upon to come through for the "Vultures."

Spy Scare In Cincinnati Laid to Yankee Sleuths

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Sept. 20 — Spy scares have been paralyzing Cincinnati ever since Joseph V. McCarthy, head of the Eagle Eye Detective Agency (disguises a specialty), announced in a horse whisper that he was sending a secret operative west to scout the Reds.

Along the Ohio river, the citizens lock their doors at night and look under the bed before retiring. Every nook and cranny of the Reds' ball park has been searched for concealed speech-recording devices, and this week the police arrested an eavesdropper outside the clubhouse door just as he was dropping his eaves. He turned out to be a harmless local character who has dropped eaves in the neighborhood for twenty years, man and boy. He can't seem to keep hold of them. The cops dismissed him with a warning.

It is futile to attempt to detect a McCarthy spy in action, for Mr. McCarthy's system of disguise would baffle Sherlock Holmes. A good example is the case of Lefty Gomez, the intrepid Castilian sleuth, who was sent by McCarthy to scout the Giants for the world series on his day off a few years ago.

Shooting A Sinister Glance

Known in shadowing circles as Operative X-16, Gomez is a master of disguise. In this emergency he put on a pair of blue glasses and set forth with his well-thumbed copy of Steinfeldt's "Rules of Spying; or, What the Young Operative Should Know" under his arm. Lefty had been rereading the chapter on "How To Shoot Sinister Glances" that morning, and he was deeply impressed by what Steinfeldt, a specialist on this subject, had to say. You probably remember the passage:

"To shoot a sinister glance at long range, the naked eye is enough. A bushy eyebrow helps the effect"—Steinfeldt sold bushy eyebrows on the side—"and the young spy will soon learn to shoot sinister glances in two different directions at once. For close-range work, a pair of dark glasses, blue or green, is indispensable."

Steinfeldt did a small retail business in dark glasses. He goes on to say:

"I get great result myself by a sudden sharp look over the right shoulder. If the young secret agent gets a stiff neck at first from this device, because of lack of training, I recommend Steinfeldt's soothing neck liniment, in the small 25-cent bottle or the 50-cent jar. If a spy does not look sinister, what good is he" asks Steinfeldt, and goes on to answer his own question as follows: "No good at all."

Selecting a seat back of third base, Operative Gomez shot a sudden swift glance at Frank Snyder, coaching for the Giants, to try to steal a signal. Snyder promptly walked over to Gomez's seat, and X-16 pulled up his coat collar and huddled back to escape detection. His disguise was impenetrable.

Snyder Does Some Guessing

"Hello, Lefty," said Mr. Snyder affably. "Been having trouble with your eyes"

"He doesn't know me," whispered Gomez hoarsely to himself. "I think he's guessing."

"What's the matter?" pursued Mr. Snyder. "Have you got a cold?"

"No speak English," said Operative Gomez, as recommended by Steinfeldt in chapter VIII, 103-105, and 107-108, Ibid.

"Not very good, I admit," said Coach Snyder reassuringly, "but, if you polished up on your grammar, you would probably improve quite a bit."

Mr. Gomez made no comment, and the Giant coach returned to his post, saying "So long, Lefty. See you in the Series." There is absolutely no doubt in X-16's mind that Snyder made a game but useless bluff and had no idea he was really Gomez. No student of Steinfeldt has ever been detected in the act of espionage.

However, Mr. McCarthy is not using Gomez to stalk the Reds in Cincinnati because he never uses the same agent twice on the same kind of job. A beautiful woman with one eye is said to be representing the Yankees on this assignment, though another rumor has it that a Filipino valet has been planted close to Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds, to steal signals while pressing McKechnie's pants. McCarthy will neither affirm nor deny this report.

"You know my methods," said the head of the Eagle Eye Agency the other day. "I keep the enemy in the dark. Suffice it to say that the Reds are being scouted by one who has never failed me. We will call him Z-12."

McCarthy can call him Z-12 if he wants to, but I would like to assure the public that that is not his real name. Just another subterfuge.

Four Grid Candidates Withdraw at U. of D.

Newark, Del., Sept. 20 (AP)—The ranks of the University of Delaware's football candidates were depleted today by the withdrawal from school of four students from Pennsylvania.

The four, Franklin Clement, of Lancaster, Pa.; Maynard Stravinski and Bill Murray, of Plymouth, Pa., and Thad Belefski, of Glyn Lyn, Pa., were outstanding freshmen candidates, Coach Steve Grenda said.

Browns Defeat Red Sox 11 to 8 In 16 Innings

Three Run Rally Gives Cellar Dwellers a Victory

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP) —With darkness threatening to end the struggle as a tie, the St. Louis Browns hammered out three runs in the sixteenth inning tonight to take the longest game of the American League season from the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 8.

A double by Joe Gallagher and singles by Sam Harshany and Myril Hoag, together with a brace of sacrifices and an error by Fritz Ostermueller, the fourth and losing Sox pitcher, put the game on ice for the Browns. The Browns banged out twenty-two hits off the Sox pitchers, starting with Lefty Grove.

Pitching sparkling ball, Bob Harris gave the Sox only four hits over the last nine innings.

Hubbell Bests Lee In Pitching Duel

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP) — Carl Hubbell, still a handy man to have around when the going is rough, outpitched Big Bill Lee today to give the New York Giants a 4 to 2 victory over the Cubs.

The veteran southpaw spaced eight hits effectively and both the runs scored against him were unearned.

Wade Will Have Another Strong Team at Duke

Blue Devils Have Fine Chance for Second Unbeaten Season

BY FRITZ LITTLEJOHN

Durham, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP)—Duke's Blue Devils can't expect to go on forever with one perfect season after another, but they have a glowing chance of making it two unbeaten regular campaigns in a row this year.

That's a large order for Wallace Wade's big blue club, with Colgate, Pittsburgh and Syracuse coming up in successive Saturdays starting Oct. 7, but Blue Devil boosters here are banking on it.

They see the biggest threat in Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets, who are always toughest when the Dukes are flying high. They spoiled one unbeaten mark for Wade in 1933. It takes only a quick glance at the squad of forty-nine working on the big pine-bordered bowl here to tell that the Blue Devils are going to be hard to get along with. Here is what Wade has to work with:

Four Fine Ends

Four fine ends, Willard (Bolo) Perdue, who blocked a punt to beat Pitt last year, Bill Bailey, Leonard Darnell, and Jim Marion, all lettermen.

Two letterman tackles, Alex Wimberson and Tony Ruffa, who kicked the goal that gave Duke its shortlived lead over Southern California in the last Rose Bowl game; and seven reserves headed by Bob McDonough, 200-pound sophomore.

Two letterman guards, Captain Allen (Sweetpea) Johnson and Frank Ribar, a converted tackle, and seven more understudies.

At center, Wade will miss redheaded Dan Hill, but he has Gordon Burns and Spencer Robb up from the reserves and Aubrey Gill, a sophomore who likely will be getting the starting job before the season is half over.

Backfield Is Strong

In the backfield, the Dukes will pack more wallop. Not so good defensively as the 1938 secondary that put out all opponents until Southern California scored in the last minute to win the Rose Bowl title 7-3, this year's backs will be faster, more versatile and there will be more of them.

In the first backfield are the triple threat brothers George and Charles McAfee, Easy Eaves, veteran blocking back, and Roger Robinson, full. In the second quartet are Steve Lach, George Bokinsky, Bill Davis and Carl Deane. Winston Siegfried, a sophomore hailed as one of the south's finest prospects, is running with the third team, which gives one an idea.

The schedule: Sept. 30 Davidson at Davidson, N. C., Oct. 7 Colgate, Oct. 14 Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh, Oct. 21 Syracuse, Oct. 28 Wake Forest, Nov. 4 Georgia Tech at Atlanta, Nov. 11 Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va., Nov. 18 North Carolina, Nov. 25 N. C. State at Raleigh.

Back To Baseball

Detroit — With the big fights out of the way, the crowd turns back to baseball. In the American League, the Yankees are in, of course. But the battle still rages in the National and the action still is hot along the Western Front, where the Reds seek to hold their edge over the Cardinals.

The Reds should hold it. They have been the better team so far and, with just a little way to go, should be able to fight off the challenge that Blades, Medwick, Martin and the rest of the rejuvenated gas house gang are hurling at them. If the Reds' morale needed any stiffening — and I doubt that it did — that should have been provided by Bill McKechnie's most recent communique — and one of the few he has released all year, Bill, you know, has been shy about claiming anything for the Reds. But just the other day he claimed the pennant for them.

In effect, Bill said that if the Reds' couldn't win now they'd be a spineless bunch — and he didn't think they were that. He thought they had plenty of heart and now that the time had come for them to prove it, he believed they would deliver.

—o—

The Cardinals' Chance

The main barrier the Reds still have to hurdle, of course, is wrought by their four remaining games with the Cardinals. As they approach this barrier, the Cardinals still are close enough to them to grab the flag by capturing all four games.

Baseball still being the most unpredictable of all sports and the Cardinals being hot and game and full of zing, it may be that they will grab these games and go on to the pennant and the World Series. But form lingers on the side of the Reds—form or past performance, call it what you will. Of the eighteen games played so far between the teams, the Reds have won nine. And all they need — if they get by the other clubs — is an even break against the Cardinals to put them over.

Even the Winners Suffer

It may be that the impending struggle between the Reds and the Cardinals will leave even the winners breathless and so send them into the World Series against the Yankees in a weakened state, which is not exactly desirable on the part of a team winding up for its main chance against McCarthy's bombers.

Traditionally, the National League race is close, while in the American League, the pennant winner finishes under wraps. This, as National Leaguers point out, gives the American League a bulge in the World Series. This, they say, is why the American League entry in the Series wins more often than not.

A close race, of course, generally means more money, because where one club is in front and has the pennant well within its grasp with a month or so of the season to go, there is a sharp drop in attendance figures. But I wouldn't be surprised if the National League wouldn't gladly forego some of these lucrative photo finishes just to get one clear shot at the American League champions.

If you think I'm kidding about that, you do not know the true depth of feeling between the leagues and how bitterly the jealousies still flare that began away back in 1903, when the upstart American League first pulled up on even terms with the National.

Thomas To Open Season Friday

Franklin Will Be First Opponent for Coach Suder's Team

Thomas, W. Va., Sept. 20—Coach Emil Suder's Thomas High School football team, which opened its season last week by losing to Grafton High 20-0, will start its Potomac Valley Conference campaign Friday afternoon by opposing Franklin High on the local gridiron.

With eight veterans on the squad and plenty of new material to fill in the gaps, Coach Suder said he believes Thomas will have a more balanced eleven than last year. The current combination will be lighter but faster and reserve power will be more plentiful. If no key men suffer injuries, the local mentor believes Thomas will have a better season than in 1938.

Coach Suder said today that Grafton was played too early but that he had no other choice. Rather than risk injuries, Suder used 29 boys in the clash. He stated that he thinks his first 15 players could have held the score to one touchdown.

The team is built around Halfback Tony DiBacco, End Charles Ford, Tackles Bob Kent and Frank Knofel, Backs John Yonish and Nick Monda, Center Phillip Lamont and Guard "Foby" DeFrank. Lamont is the heaviest in the above group, weighing 162, while DiBacco, the lightest, tips the beam at 130.

Newcomers are Ends Bob Luzier, Myron Shaffer, Junior Nutter and Joe Yonish; Backs Riggie Gerome, Riggie Gennantonio, Ernie Helmick, Richard Hull, Junior James and Ed Mickelitch; Guards Richard Cannon, Sam Scott, Arthur McLuckie, B. Evans, Paul Maniscarco, Mick Goodall and E. White; Center John Ferruso; Tackles Junior Carrico, Delbert Gauer and E. Evans and End Patsy Santangelo. The boy packing the most weight on the squad is Delbert Gauer at 170 pounds.

Thomas will play five more games including conference tussles with Franklin, Petersburg away, Moorefield home and Parsons away. The other tilt will be with Rowlesburg here in the final contest of the season October 20. The schedule follows:

Sept. 22—Franklin, home
Sept. 29—Petersburg, away
Oct. 5—Moorefield, home
Oct. 13—Parsons, away
Oct. 20—Rowlesburg, home

Eckhart and Savage Open Series Sunday

The three-game series between the Eckhart and Mt. Savage clubs of the Wills' Creek Valley Baseball League will open Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at Community Park, Frostburg, President William Chapman of the loop announced yesterday.

Chapman and representatives of the Eckhart and Mt. Savage teams completed arrangements for the series at a meeting last night at Eckhart. Both clubs agreed to cut the series from five to three games, Chapman said. Eckhart won the first game toss and elected to stage the contest at Frostburg's enclosed park.

The second game will be played Sunday, October 1, at Mount Savage and a toss of a coin will determine the site of the third contest if by Chapman to handle the games.

Eckhart probably will have Arnone on the mound and Moore behind the plate for the opener, while Mount Savage's opening game battery is likely to be Baker and Hopkins.

Three umpires will be assigned by Chapman to handle the games.

Shrine Gun Club Will Stage Shoot

The Cumberland Shrine Gun Club will stage a practice trap and skeet shoot on the Ali Ghan Shrine Club range this afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock.

'When Tomorrow Comes' Now Showing At Maryland

"Let's face it," says Director John M. Stahl, "Women love to cry. For a woman, there's nothing like a good cry, particularly if she is weeping over someone else's woes. When movie fans fumble around for the old handkerchief, you may be certain the picture is an unqualified success."

That tears are dollars and cents at the box office is Mr. Stahl's formula, and one which he has more or less strictly adhered to for over twenty years of picture-making.

As in Universal's "Back Street," "Imitation of Life," and "The Magnificent Obsession," once again the value of that formula is borne out with Stahl's planning and direction of "When Tomorrow Comes," which stars Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer, now being screened at the Maryland Theater.

In every picture which Stahl directs there is a heart-tug, because, as he says, "A heart-tug is a hundred times more effective than a loud guffaw. I know because I have tried them both. You can easily forget that you laughed at the big fat man who slipped on the banana peel. But what makes you cry stays down deep in your consciousness for a long time. And women love to cry over a movie, provided you give their emotions the proper stimulus."

Every movie Stahl directs is aimed straight at the women in the audience. He deliberately uses the technique which points action and story to play upon the more sentimental emotions. And he's frankly insidious about his methods. A minor mood is established for even the small parts and all are treated with a melting pathos. Even the musical score is shrewdly arranged to carry out the subdued and sorrowful note of the story.

"Maisie" and "Call of The Yukon"

Closing today at the Embassy theater is the twin-hit show, Ann Sothern and Robert Young in the Metro Goldwyn Mayer hit "Maisie" with Cliff Edwards, Ruth Hussey and Ian Hunter, and James Oliver Curwood's adventure hit "Call of the Yukon" starring Richard Arlen and Beverly Roberts. In addition to the two features there will be the second chapter of the serial "Boy Scouts To the Rescue," starring Jackie Cooper.

"Oklahoma Terror" and "Lady Behave"

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy theater will be Jack Randall in the western drama "Oklahoma Terror." The second feature will be Sally Eilers, Neil Hamilton in "Lady Behave". Also on the same program there will be the last chapter of the serial "Flying G-Men".

Bonita Granville Risks Dangers in New Film

The courage of the intrepid and clever Nancy Drew is sorely tested in the latest picture — entitled "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase"—in the Warner Bros. series based upon the popular Carolyn Keene books, which opens today at the Liberty Theater.

This is the fourth picture in the series. Bonita Granville is again the girl detective, Frankie Thomas her boy friend and John Litel is Nancy's father. William Clemens directed.

To help him make a huge profit on a deal involving his own property, Talbert wants to get two old maids out of their home for a night or two.

After the murder of the sisters' chauffeur, Nancy and her boy friend, Ted Nickerson, put their talents to work on the case. Ted constitutes himself a guard for the old ladies and he is asleep in the basement of their home when Tolbert enters through a secret door and leaves a note warning Ted he'll meet the same fate as the chauffeur.

Neither he nor Nancy is frightened off, however, and pursuing their investigations they discover the secret door and follow an underground passage which leads them into Talbert's house. Here they come upon a document which explains why Talbert wishes the old maid sisters to lose their property.

Dix An "Indian" For Third Time

For the third time, Richard Dix, starred in Republic's "Man of Conquest," which is now at the Garden, the first screen dramatization of the life of Sam Houston, has been made an Indian Chieftain before the cameras. Previously he smoked the Pipe of Peace in the celebrated rites of induction in "Red Skin," and later in "The Vanishing American," two of his earlier pictures. This time, for "Man of Conquest," he was made a chief of the Cherokee Nation in ceremonials that simulated the rites which took place in Sam Houston's life more than a hundred years ago.

In "Man of Conquest," Dix portrays Sam Houston, liberator.

Brown, Raye Star In Football Comedy

Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye, those wide-mouthed dispensers of zany comedy, continue to erupt a volcano of fun in Paramount's hilarious new football comedy, "$1,000 a Touchdown which will open tomorrow and also show Saturday and Sunday at the Strand Theatre.

In this story of Joe's and Martha's joint venture into the field of higher and funnier education—they are assisted by a host of favorites as Eric Blore—buttling again, of course—Susan Hayward and John Hartley, teamed for romance, and Joyce Mathews.

The screenplay of $1,000 a Touchdown," an original by Delma Daves, provides just the sort of material needed for the laugh-provoking abilities of Joe and Martha. It starts with Joe as a failure — and why? Joe's a scion of a famous theatrical family, but he can't get anywhere in the theatre because he loses his voice every time he faces an audience of more than ten people! Martha's having her troubles, too. Her only asset, is a bankrupt college left to her by her ancestors.

While Joe is seeking a cure for his difficulty, he runs into Martha. Egged on by family pride and Joe's plight, Martha decides to attempt to make a go of the college with Joe's help. She borrows money from an old skinflint who holds the mortgage on the school, and after enlisting a group of stranded actors to serve as a faculty, opens for business with Joe as president.

The expected student body fails to arrive. Martha, Joe and the faculty hold a conference, and decide that the school needs a football team to advertise it. Joe recruits a team by holding forth certain "inducements" of his own design and with the handsome team on hand,, co-eds flock to the school.

COLLEGE COACHES

Edwin C. Horrell

Born in Missouri, but a Californian since he was a child, Horrell attended the University of California at Berkeley, where he was captain and All-American center in 1924, under the late Andy Smith. Horrell was on the last of the old California "wonder teams."

Likes High Scores

The new U. C. L. A. coach competed in everything from swimming to football in high school. In college he dabbled in track as a freshman, but later devoted all his time to football.

In the 1924 Stanford game he scored eight of the Bears' nine points by running a free ball to a touchdown and making a tackle for a safety.

Horrell will stick to the single wing back formation, and plans to concentrate on offense.

The U. C. L. A. coach is 35 years old and received his nickname (Babe) because he was the youngest of 10 children.

The name of Horrell is new in football coaching ranks this year. Edwin C. (Babe) Horrell is guiding the destinies of University of California at Los Angeles for the first time.

But the name of Horrell is a household word at Pasadena, Cal., where the playing field of Muir Tech (old Pasadena) High school was named after the U. C. L. A. mentor and his brothers, all outstanding athletes.

Horrell took over the U. C. L. A. job in January, succeeding William H. Spaulding, under whom he had served as coach of guards and backs since 1931.

Wade Will Have Another Strong Team at Duke

Blue Devils Have Fine Chance for Second Unbeaten Season

BY FRITZ LITTLEJOHN

Durham, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP)—Duke's Blue Devils can't expect to go on forever with one perfect season after another, but they have a glowing chance of making it two unbeaten regular campaigns in a row this year.

That's a large order for Wallace Wade's big blue club, with Colgate, Pittsburgh and Syracuse coming up in successive Saturdays starting Oct. 7, but Blue Devil boosters here are banking on it.

They see the biggest threat in Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets, who are always toughest when the Dukes are flying high. They spoiled one unbeaten mark for Wade in 1933. Neither he nor Nancy is frightened off, however, and pursuing their investigations they discover the secret door and follow an underground passage which leads them into Talbert's house. Here they come upon a document which explains why Talbert wishes the old maid sisters to lose their property.

Dix An "Indian" For Third Time

For the third time, Richard Dix, starred in Republic's "Man of Conquest," which is now at the Garden, the first screen dramatization of the life of Sam Houston, has been made an Indian Chieftain before the cameras. Previously he smoked the Pipe of Peace in the celebrated rites of induction in "Red Skin," and later in "The Vanishing American," two of his earlier pictures. This time, for "Man of Conquest," he was made a chief of the Cherokee Nation in ceremonials that simulated the rites which took place in Sam Houston's life more than a hundred years ago.

In "Man of Conquest," Dix portrays Sam Houston, liberator.

Brown, Raye Star In Football Comedy

Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye, those wide-mouthed dispensers of zany comedy, continue to erupt a volcano of fun in Paramount's hilarious new football comedy, "$1,000 a Touchdown which will open tomorrow and also show Saturday and Sunday at the Strand Theatre.

In this story of Joe's and Martha's joint venture into the field of higher and funnier education—they are assisted by a host of favorites as Eric Blore—buttling again, of course—Susan Hayward and John Hartley, teamed for romance, and Joyce Mathews.

The screenplay of $1,000 a Touchdown," an original by Delma Daves, provides just the sort of material needed for the laugh-provoking abilities of Joe and Martha. It starts with Joe as a failure — and why? Joe's a scion of a famous theatrical family, but he can't get anywhere in the theatre because he loses his voice every time he faces an audience of more than ten people! Martha's having her troubles, too. Her only asset, is a bankrupt college left to her by her ancestors.

While Joe is seeking a cure for his difficulty, he runs into Martha. Egged on by family pride and Joe's plight, Martha decides to attempt to make a go of the college with Joe's help. She borrows money from an old skinflint who holds the mortgage on the school, and after enlisting a group of stranded actors to serve as a faculty, opens for business with Joe as president.

The expected student body fails to arrive. Martha, Joe and the faculty hold a conference, and decide that the school needs a football team to advertise it. Joe recruits a team by holding forth certain "inducements" of his own design and with the handsome team on hand, co-eds flock to the school.

Edwin C. Horrell

The name of Horrell is new in football coaching ranks this year, but Edwin C. (Babe) Horrell is guiding the destinies of University of California at Los Angeles for the first time.

But the name of Horrell is a household word at Pasadena, Cal., where the playing field of Muir Tech (old Pasadena) High school was named after the U. C. L. A. mentor and his brothers, all outstanding athletes.

Horrell took over the U. C. L. A. reins in January, succeeding William Spaulding, under whom he had served as coach of guards and backs since 1931.

Born in Missouri, but a Californian since he was a child, Horrell attended the University of California at Berkeley, where he was captain and All-American center in 1924, under the late Andy Smith. Horrell was on the last of the old California "wonder teams."

Likes High Scores

The new U. C. L. A. coach competed in everything from swimming to football in high school. In college he dabbled in track as a freshman, but later devoted all his time to football.

In the 1924 Stanford game he scored eight of the Bears' nine points by running a free ball to a touchdown and making a tackle for a safety.

Horrell will stick to the single wing back formation, and plans to concentrate on offense.

B. & O. Railroad Business at Keyser Shops Is Increasing

Yardmaster Is Back on Job as Work Picks Up

Fifty More Men Will Go to Work Monday; 462 Now Employed

Keyser, W. Va., Sept. 29 — At the same time that an additional group of fifty men ordered to report to work at the Baltimore and Ohio railroad car repair shops here next Monday, T. V. O'Connor began an eight-hour trick as yardmaster today at 3 p. m.

O'Connor's check-in marks the first time a yardmaster has been assigned to work here since the freight terminal was moved from Keyser to Cumberland in 1933. B. & O. officials here refused this afternoon to make any comment as to whether there was any possibility of the terminal being relocated in Keyser, but unofficial observers reported a great deal of unusual activity in the yards here. Trackmen today were checking over the rails in Keyser, and cleaning weeds and debris from between the ties.

462 Men Employed

The total number of car repairmen employed at the shops here will be 462, when Monday's bloc reports for work, and another fifty-man unit is scheduled to be recalled before the end of September, according to a statement by railroad officials. B. & O. officers said several weeks ago that Keyser's quota of shopworkers has been filled, and that car-building and car-repairing operations necessitated the importation of shopmen from other points along the B. & O. line.

Real estate owners here this week reported a "renting boom." The railroad workmen are said to be responsible for the shortage of empty houses and apartments in Keyser. One house-owner said that rents have gone up "considerably" since the last recall of B. & O. shopmen, but refused to allow himself to be quoted regarding the percentage of increase.

Business Is Better

Other indications of returning prosperity here include the opening of four "self-service" grocery stores —two of them operated by nationally-known chain-store owners, and the granting of two building permits yesterday by the Keyser city council to a former Keyser man who now lives in Elkins.

Fermlalon was given yesterday by Keyser councilmen in regular session to Paul H. Nefflen, Elkins, a former Keyser jeweler, to erect a two-story building and a one-story structure at 123-125 north Main street and at 76 Armstrong street, respectively. Nefflen's application to the council for the building permits was received in a letter. The Elkins man did not appear in person, and it was impossible to learn here this evening for what purpose the buildings were to be used.

Lions Hear Kight

Members of the Keyser Lions Club at their regular meeting last night heard a speech by Frank Kight, Senior clerk in charge of a WPA grave-locating project. Kight described his activities as the person in charge of the project which has as its object the finding and marking of the graves of veterans of all United States wars.

Huntington Rail Concern Closed Down by Strike

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP) —A strike today closed the West Virginia Rail Company, which normally employs about 350 men.

W. M. Napier, chairman of the labor committee of the Huntington Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers (CIO), was not available, and other officers of the lodge declined comment.

D. C. Schonthal, vice president in charge of operations at the plant, said, however, that the walkout followed negotiations for a new contract between the company and the union, in which "about everything was agreed upon except the questions of an increase in wages and a closed shop."

Schonthal added that the company had agreed to recognize the union as collective bargaining agent and had offered a wage increase on a sliding scale, based on production.

He said the union had rejected this, demanding that the company's proposed maximum sliding scale be put into effect at once.

"Failing to agree upon these two questions," he said, "the union called a strike."

Youth Reverses Plea With Trial Half Over

P. J. Carr, attorney for the 21-year-old defendant, told the court Marquis' plea would be changed after Sandy Costello, 20, indicted jointly with Marquis, had testified.

Payroll Skyrocket Continues To Soar In West Virginia

Industrial Increase May Reach 1929 Peak Labor Department Predicts

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 20. (AP)—The Department of Labor said today West Virginia industrial payrolls may reach 1929 levels by Jan. 1.

Labor Commissioner Frank Snyder, reporting on new employment gains, asserted:

"If business conditions continue to advance as they have, payrolls by the end of the year will be as high, if not higher, than they were in 1929."

Director C. R. McKenna, of the state employment service, said placements in private industry during the past two weeks have increased 100 per cent, with 2,600 persons getting jobs.

He predicted the rate would increase.

Heavy demands from the coal fields—for loaders, diggers, couplers and tipplemen—were reported by McKenna, who said his office could not meet the demand for skilled workers from some points.

In all, the registration of jobless has been pared to 78,000 persons.

"If things keep on as they have for the past two weeks we will have calls from practically every industry in the state," McKenna added.

City Detective Winged As Bandits Shoot Way Out of Filling Station

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP)—Bandits surprised by detectives shot their way out of a service station today, wounding Former Police Chief Albert McGale and leaving one of their number behind.

McGale, a city detective, was wounded in the shoulder.

His colleagues took a man booked as Thurman McCarty, 27, to jail. McGale said he and other detectives were tipped that the station would be robbed and hid there until three men opened the garage doors and backed in a truck.

The officer said one of the trio waved a flashlight about the dark interior and, spotting the officers, opened fire.

The detectives returned the fire and two of the bandits leaped into the truck and sped away, shooting as they fled.

Flood Control Project Is Pondered by City Officials

Meyersdale, Pa., Sept. 20.—At a special meeting of the borough council last evening it was voted to continue the project comprising a survey of the Flaugherty and Casselman valleys to secure data required before any move can be made looking to flood control in the local area which is occasionally visited by destructive floods.

This project is being sponsored jointly by the Meyersdale borough council and the board of supervisors of Summit township.

B. & O. Railroad Business at Keyser Shops Is Increasing

Fifty More Men Will Go to Work Monday; 462 Now Employed

Keyser, W. Va., Sept. 29 — At the same time that an additional group of fifty men ordered to report to work at the Baltimore and Ohio railroad car repair shops here next Monday, T. V. O'Connor began an eight-hour trick as yardmaster today at 3 p. m.

O'Connor's check-in marks the first time a yardmaster has been assigned to work here since the freight terminal was moved from Keyser to Cumberland in 1933. B. & O. officials here refused this afternoon to make any comment as to whether there was any possibility of the terminal being relocated in Keyser, but unofficial observers reported a great deal of unusual activity in the yards here. Trackmen today were checking over the rails in Keyser, and cleaning weeds and debris from between the ties.

462 Men Employed

The total number of car repairmen employed at the shops here will be 462, when Monday's bloc reports for work, and another fifty-man unit is scheduled to be recalled before the end of September, according to a statement by railroad officials. B. & O. officers said several weeks ago that Keyser's quota of shopworkers has been filled, and that car-building and car-repairing operations necessitated the importation of shopmen from other points along the B. & O. line.

Real estate owners here this week reported a "renting boom." The railroad workmen are said to be responsible for the shortage of empty houses and apartments in Keyser. One house-owner said that rents have gone up "considerably" since the last recall of B. & O. shopmen, but refused to allow himself to be quoted regarding the percentage of increase.

Business Is Better

Other indications of returning prosperity here include the opening of four "self-service" grocery stores —two of them operated by nationally-known chain-store owners, and the granting of two building permits yesterday by the Keyser city council to a former Keyser man who now lives in Elkins.

Permission was given yesterday by Keyser councilmen in regular session to Paul H. Neffler, Elkins, a former Keyser jeweler, to erect a two-story building and a one-story structure at 123-125 north Main street and at 76 Armstrong street, respectively. Neffler's application to the council for the building permits was received in a letter. The Elkins man did not appear in person, and it was impossible to learn here this evening for what purpose the buildings were to be used.

Lions Hear Kight

Members of the Keyser Lions Club at their regular meeting last night heard a speech by Frank Kight, Senior clerk in charge of a WPA grave-locating project. Kight described his activities as the person in charge of the project which has as its object the finding and marking of the graves of veterans of all United States wars.

Huntington Rail Concern Closed Down by Strike

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP) —A strike today closed the West Virginia Rail Company, which normally employs about 350 men.

W. M. Napier, chairman of the labor committee of the Huntington Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers (CIO), was not available, and other officers of the lodge declined comment.

D. C. Schonthal, vice president in charge of operations at the plant, said, however, that the walkout followed negotiations for a new contract between the company and the union, in which "about everything was agreed upon except the questions of an increase in wages and a closed shop."

Schonthal added that the company had agreed to recognize the union as collective bargaining agent and had offered a wage increase on a sliding scale, based on production.

He said the union had rejected this, demanding that the company's proposed maximum sliding scale be put into effect at once.

"Failing to agree upon these two questions," he said, "the union called a strike."

Youth Reverses Plea With Trial Half Over

Hinton, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP) — Ralph Marquis stopped his robbery trial midway to plead guilty to the $155 holdup of the Rits Theater.

Payroll Skyrocket Continues To Soar In West Virginia

Industrial Increase May Reach 1929 Peak Labor Department Predicts

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 20. (AP)—The Department of Labor said today West Virginia industrial payrolls may reach 1929 levels by Jan. 1.

Labor Commissioner Frank Snyder, reporting on new employment gains, asserted:

"If business conditions continue to advance as they have, payrolls by the end of the year will be as high, if not higher, than they were in 1929."

Director C. R. McKenna, of the state employment service, said placements in private industry during the past two weeks have increased 100 per cent, with 2,600 persons getting jobs.

He predicted the rate would increase.

Heavy demands from the coal fields—for loaders, diggers, couplers and tipplemen—were reported by McKenna, who said his office could not meet the demand for skilled workers from some points.

In all, the registration of jobless has been pared to 78,000 persons.

"If things keep on as they have for the past two weeks we will have calls from practically every industry in the state," McKenna added.

City Detective Winged As Bandits Shoot Way Out of Filling Station

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP)—Bandits surprised by detectives shot their way out of a service station today, wounding Former Police Chief Albert McGale and leaving one of their number behind.

McGale, a city detective, was wounded in the shoulder.

His colleagues took a man booked as Thurman McCarty, 27, to jail. McGale said he and other detectives were tipped that the station would be robbed and hid there until three men opened the garage doors and backed in a truck.

The officer said one of the trio waved a flashlight about the dark interior, and, spotting the officers, opened fire.

The detectives returned the fire and two of the bandits leaped into the truck and sped away, shooting as they fled.

Bells of Zion Church Silenced After Sixty Years of Service

Frostburg, Sept. 20—For almost sixty years the bells in the steeple of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church, East Main street, have called the congregation to worship and reminded the people of the community of their religious obligations.

At last these huge bells come to silent rest. How long they remain so will depend upon obtaining the necessary funds for their repair.

These bells were "poured" and hung by the McShave Bell Foundry, Baltimore, Md., in the year 1880, at which time Zion Church underwent extensive renovations. The bells suspended on large wooden beams sixteen inches square are of "bell metal," a hard alloy or bronza, made of copper and tin.

Bells Massive

The largest measures thirty-four inches across the bell and weighs 1,200 pounds; the second largest measures twenty-nine inches, weighing 750 pounds; and, the smallest, 24 inches, weighs 275 pounds. Their massiveness is only appreciated when seen crowded into the small beligry of the steeple.

The more than half a century of service has loosened two of the bells in their yokes. A representative of the McShane Bell Co., who was called in to inspect the bells, assured the people that there was no danger but suggested that it were best that the bells not be rung.

Repairs May Be Made

As long as they remain silent there was no possibility of mishap. Recently, some of the older residents of Frostburg commented that the bells seemed to have lost their old-time tone.

Tis condition will be remedied at such time as repairs become possible. It is hoped that it will be in the very near future that these bells will begin another half century of service.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse anything else. At all drug stores. 10¢ and 25¢.

Eight room dwelling with bath, pantry, practically new hot water heating plant and porches. Located No. 116 Pennsylvania avenue, on a valuable lot and in a good neighborhood. The cost of conditioning this property plus converting it into a duplex dwelling would be comparatively low. Purchaser could occupy one half while the other half produces sufficient revenue to pay all overhead expense and 6% interest on large part of the total investment. One way to buy a home and pay for it easily. It would be very difficult to find as much property so well located, at so low a price. If interested act promptly while this property is available.

Eight room dwelling with bath, pantry, practically new hot water heating plant and porches. Located No. 116 Pennsylvania avenue, on a valuable lot and in a good neighborhood. The cost of conditioning this property, plus converting it into a duplex dwelling would be comparatively low. Purchaser could occupy one half while the other half produces sufficient revenue to pay all overhead expense and 6% interest on large part of the total investment. One way to buy a home and pay for it easily. It would be very difficult to find as much property so well located, at so low a price. If interested act promptly while this property is available.

Spectacular Three-Car Crash on Greene Stree

Man Seriously Injured, Four Women Hurt

Police Arrest Woman on Reckless Driving Charge

Five persons were injured, one seriously, in a spectacular three-way automobile crash late last night on Greene street.

Police were still investigating the accident early this morning in an effort to clear up some details which remained somewhat shrouded in mystery.

Most seriously injured was Grover Kinzy, 52-year-old U. S. forestry department employe, of Catonsville. He suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, a deep gash on the forehead, and multiple lacerations and bruises about the face and body.

Allegany hospital attendants said his condition was serious.

Woman Arrested

Others injured were:

Mrs. Truman Fuller, 32, of 422 Baltimore avenue, cuts and bruises about the face and body, and several teeth knocked out. She was treated at Allegany hospital.

Miss Toby Bible, 22, of 210 West Main street, Frostburg, cuts and bruises. She was treated at Allegany hospital.

Mrs. Dorothy Dudek, 30, of 210 West Main street, Frostburg, cuts and bruises. She was held at police headquarters and charged with reckless driving.

Miss Mary Kathereine Kercher, 24, of 418 Robin terrace, lacerations about the head and face. She was treated at a nearby home and sent to her home.

Hits Foreman's Car

Police said that that Mrs. Dudek's car, traveling west, crashed into an automobile driven by Charles McCullough, 42-year-old Celanese foreman, of Rawlings, which had just turned into Greene street from Allegany street.

After striking the McCullough car at the Paw Paw Place, the Dudek car careened 290 feet up the street and crashed into a parked car on the south side of the street, police added. The car was owned by Homer Martz, of Narrows Park, who was visiting his brother.

Denies Driving

Mrs. Dudek, who said she had no driver's license, denied being the driver of the car, although Mrs. Fuller and Miss Bible, riding with her, said she was driving.

Mrs. Dudek told police that a man whose name she did not remember was driving the car.

Kinzy was apparently an occupant of the Dudek car—and the only male occupant, according to Mrs. Fuller and Miss Bible.

'Mystery Man' Hunted

Mrs. Dudek said, however, that there was another man in the car, too. She said she thought his name was Hersh and that he was from Washington. She described him as a "G-man." Police had not located this "mystery man" early this morning.

She declared that they had met the men in a down-town tap room.

Several witnesses told police that Mrs. Dudek was the driver—that she was pulled out from under the wheel after the crash. These included Homer Martz who said he pulled Mrs. Dudek from underneath the wheel of the car.

The Dudek car was virtually demolished. The McCullough car was also badly damaged, but the Martz car was driven off under its own power. Miss Kercher was an occupant of the McCullough car.

Heard for Blocks

The two crashes were heard blocks away and a huge crowd gathered at the scene.

Traffic, swelled by the shift change at Celanese, gave promise of becoming a terrific jam, but police, arriving on the scene in two squad cars and the patrol, soon had the situation under control.

Officers who investigated the crash included James M. Condon, John G. Powers, W. P. Crabtree, F. J. Zawaski, T. T. Griffin, and W. B. Lovenstein.

Two Fort Hill Students Hunt City Hall Censor

Two sober-faced Fort Hill High School freshmen arrived at City Hall yesterday to inquire if it was true that Cumberland had a dictator.

The two youngsters, Stanley Hamilton of South Waverly terrace, and Norman Barger of Woodside avenue, said they had been studying liberty, propaganda, and censorship in a history class taught by Miss Albert Ford.

When six representatives of Jehovah's Witnesses were recently arrested for distributing handbills, the class in liberty, propaganda, and censorship brought the matter up and gave the subject a good going-over.

Still Doubtful

Still a little doubtful concerning the matter after the class discussion, the two boys decided to go straight to municipal headquarters.

They ambled into City Hall, and the first persons they spied were in the water office.

"Who", asked one of the boys, "does the censoring around here?"

Then they went on to explain to the flabbergasted officials that they thought the Constitution guaranteed religious freedom and they couldn't understand why "six religious people" should be arrested.

When the gentlemen in the water office had recovered their composure again, they shooed the boys over to another office, where they could be told about such things.

Explanation Satisfies

The official in the other office, who prefered to remain anonymous, then explained to the two boys that the City of Cumberland in no way interferes with religious freedom and had no ordinance actually forbidding the distribution of handbills.

However, the official continued, the city does have a litter license ordinance which states that people who distribute handbills must pay a license fee of $10 a year. This is to prevent city streets from becoming cluttered up with unnecessary residue, the official said.

Thus assured that nobody in City Hall was tampering with the Constitution, the two grateful students thanked their informant and made their departure.

"Bank Nights" In Theaters Illegal

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 20 (AP)—Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson labeled theater "bank nights" as lotteries today and fined Robert Daly, manager of the Arcade theater, $500 for violation of the state gambling laws.

Legal sources here said they believed the case established a precedent in Maryland.

State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor told the court that one night after Judge Johnson ordered the grand jury to investigate "bank nights," a drawing was held at the theater and a patron received $300.

At the state's attorney's request, a similar case against Lucy Neal, ticket seller at the theater, was quashed.

Returned to N. Y. As Wife Deserter

A 24-year-old Soders, N. Y., man was on his way back home today—to face charges of deserting his wife and children.

The man, William Siegmyer, was picked up by county officers at the home of a sister in Borden Yard at the request of Sheriff Charles H. Wright, of Wayne county, N. Y.

Siegmyer waived extradition, and Sheriff Wright came for him yesterday, according to Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe.

The bodies of the young men were recovered earlier.

County Treasurer Asks Divorce After His Wife Drops Her Suit

County Treasurer Frederick C. (Buck) Dreyer yesterday filed suit for an absolute divorce from Mrs. Lucie Z. Dreyer.

Dreyer charges infidelity and desertion.

The bill of complaint says that the couple was married here in March, 1903, and lived together until October, 1932. It adds that, prior to October, 1932, Dreyer learned that his wife had been unfaithful and left her for this reason, but that a reconciliation was subsequently effected.

From October, 1932, to March 6 of this year, the defendant "refused him his marital rights, although they lived under the same roof," the suit alleges.

Ordered To Vacate

The bill further recites that on March 6, of this year, Mrs. Dreyer deserted him, in effect, by obtaining a court order requiring him to vacate and remain away from their home. The court order was obtained when Mrs. Dreyer, through Attorney F. Brooke Whiting, filed suit for divorce from the county official on grounds of desertion.

After asking that testimony in the case be taken in open court rather than before a court examiner, Mrs. Dreyer ordered the suit dismissed on Wednesday of last week.

The suit filed yesterday by Dreyer says that his wife's alleged desertion revives his right to seek a divorce on grounds of infidelity.

(Ordinarily, under Maryland law, charges of infidelity cannot be raised in a divorce action, if after discovering the infidelity, the plaintiff continues or returns to live with the erring mate.)

Asks Property Settlement

In asking for an "equitable distribution" of property together with an absolute decree, Dreyer took occasion to criticize his wife for working during the time they were living together. Mrs. Dreyer is operator of a beauty shop.

The suit says that all monies, real estate, and personal property amassed through Dreyer's individual efforts and their joint efforts were placed in his wife's name, together with property she amassed "at the expense of her companionship and wifely duties" to him.

Mrs. Dreyer was reported out of the city yesterday.

Huntington CIO Unit Out on Strike

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 20 (AP)—The Huntington lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers called a strike at the West Virginia Rail Company today after the collapse of negotiations for a new wage contract.

W. M. Napier, chairman of the labor committee of the lodge (CIO) said a picket line was established at the plant, which normally employes about 350 men.

Vice President D. C. Schonthal, in charge of operations, said however, that no attempt would be made to operate.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Such a map will help settle a lot of beery war arguments, and probably start a lot more.

But there's one thing we must not forget. America is free and at peace, while Europe is enslaved by war. And 3,000 miles of ocean water makes the difference — if we stay on our side of the water.

This is a sample of the way lawyers write, lifted from suit papers filed at the court house. We have entitled it, "Legal Hash", or "More of the Same".

". . . a hamburger sandwich, the materials composing which were allowed to be and become in such a bad condition that same were dangerous to persons consuming the same."

—o—

This is the way a circus press agent writes. He is describing Bernice Kelly, soft drink heiress who chose to make her debut under the circus tent instead of in the more orthodox splurge and who is coming here with the Shrine circus.

"Born in the land of cotton and pickaninnies of a prominent and wealthy family, this daring, carefree beauty is typical American and proud of it. She is young, graceful, and athletic. With blue-grey eyes, feathery eye lashes, a gracious curved mouth and clear schoolgirl complexion, blessed with perfect health, and to watch her in action is like watching a feminine tornado of sprightliness."

The circus press agents know how to pack 'em in, all right.

—o—

Even the 4-H is bombing us with high-pressure press agentry these days (not that we aren't glad to get it).

This is what we got about the movie they're showing tonight at 8 o'clock at Fairgo's Jockey Club—free of cost.

"The story of the picture is, in effect, the projection of old-fashioned ideals and principals through a colorful and fast-moving drama.

"It has a lot of good sound constructive thinking about agriculture in general and 4-H in particular, but it also has its share of dramatic thrills which involve the sinister doings of a gang of counterfeiters who have a secret rendezvous in a cave near an old farm where the hero—who is a boy just getting interested in 4-H work—and his family live. It moves at a rapid pace through mysterious warnings, shots in the dark, a summer full of hotly contested 4-H projects and competitions, and reaches a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show in Chicago, where the mystery is unraveled and the rascals brought to justice."

There have been movies and movies, but mix old-fashioned ideals and sound constructive thinking about agriculture with sinister doings, shots in the dark, hotly contested 4-H projects, and a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show and you really got something.

And the show is free. The name of it, by the way, is "Under the 4-H Flag."

How To Handle Problem Child Who Won't Eat

Health Department Makes Suggestions Which Should Work

In many Cumberland families, the kids don't get enough to eat. In many others, the mama and papa have difficulty in getting Junior and Mary to eat enough.

Six suggestions, which should aid in forming good eating habits for the children, are:

1. "Be sure that your child is rested before he goes to the table. A tired child often has little appetite.

2. "Be sure not to coax a child to eat and do not discuss his food habits in his presence. Often a child enjoys being the center of attention, and uses poor food habits as a medium of getting it. Get your child to clear his plate voluntarily by serving him small portions of each kind of food.

Set Good Example

3. "Set youd child a good example. If parents are constantly discussing their own food dislikes their children will feel it necessary to imitate them.

4. "Allow a reasonable time for each meal — 20 to 30 minutes. If the child has not finished, remove the plate without comment and do not offer any food until the next meal.

5. "Discourage eating between meals. A child who eats candy, cookies, ice cream, or quantities of bread and butter between meals cannot be expected to be hungry at meal times. With the exception of the rapidly growing older child, the average child should take nothing but fruit between meals.

Simple Foods Best

6. "Serve your child the right kind of food. Fried food or too many sweets dull the child's appetite, so that he may not wish to eat food he really needs. Simple, well prepared food meets the child's daily needs and should include milk, green vegetables, a second vegetable and potato, orange or tomato and a second fruit, whole grain bread and cereal, an egg, and a serving of meat or fish.

"If your child persists in being a feeding problem, be sure to take him to your family doctor, because there may be some serious reason behind a persistent refusal to eat."

Eckhart Man Appeals Drunk Driving Fine

James M. Lewis, 36-year-old Eckhart resident, whose car overturned on U. S. Route 40 near Grantsville Sept. 5, was fined $101 and costs last night on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

He noted an appeal after the hearing before Magistrate Charles S. Zeller.

Commission Favors Frederick St. Job

The State Roads Commission looks favorably upon the project to extend Frederick street to a junction with Nave's crossroads, Chairman Ezra B. Whitman told the Cumberland delegation which called on him yesterday.

Whitman also favors some adjustment in the present methods of distributing the state gas tax, H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, said the delegation was told.

The tax is now destributed on a basis of roads mileage in a given locality, rather than on a basis of traffic, taxes paid, or particular needs.

Group Advocates Mountain Top Parking Spaces

Meeting Tomorrow In Hancock Will Plan Attack

Directors of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, Inc., will meet in Hancock, tomorrow evening to discuss three proposed projects, H. W. Smith, an Allegany director of the group, announced yesterday.

The meeting has been called by President J. H. Gambrill Jr., of Frederick, who has outlined three matters to be considered and acted upon. They are:

1—The appointment of a roads committee to confer with the State Roads Commission regarding the construction of turnouts or parking spaces on the crests of mountains along Route 40. According to President Gambrill the turnouts should start at Braddock Heights and extend to the Maryland-Pennsylvania line.

2—Arrange for a conference with the National Park Service for the purpose of drawing up plans to put the western half of the C & O canal in shape for recreational and conservation purposes.

3—Instigating a program to see to it that Western Maryland has more adequate protection against forest fires.

Commenting on his proposed program, Gambrill stated that any program for establishing turnouts on Route 40 should also include landscaping, beautification, and the possibility of establishing parkways along the route.

Mr. Gambrill state that he had invited Congressman William D. Byron to attend the meeting Friday, since the representative is keenly interested in revamping the old C & O canal.

After corresponding with state forestry officials, Gambrill said he had learned that protection for vast areas of Western Maryland wooded sections is considerably below par. A member of the state department has promised to attend the Hancock meeting, Gambrill said.

The meeting in Hancock will start at 6 p. m., according to Secretary R. B. Wolfe. Allegany county directors who will attend the session are Mr. Smith, Douglas Bowie, and W. M. Race.

Man Armed with Toy Gun Gets One Year in Cut

The story of two suspicious characters who were seen brandishing guns was told yesterday in Trial Magistrates court.

The guns turned out to be toys, but the two men were charged with swiping them from a five and ten here on Sept. 15.

Although the guns were valued at only twenty cents each, one of the men, Elton Armstrong, a Pennsylvanian, was sentenced to the House of Correction for one year.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., said Armstrong had already done four years in his native state for theft. Armstrong seemed pleased with the sentence, preferring the year in the Cut to being returned home as a parole violator.

The second "gunman," Melvin Hardin, of Odessa, Texas, was given a suspended sentence on condition he hit the trail for home. The men said they planned to join a circus here.

PERSONALITY GIRL—Marjorie Sluss, of Frostburg, ranks twelfth now in the contest to select Western Maryland's Personality Girl. The contest is entering the final stages.

Kathleen Wright Takes Lead in Personality Girl Contest

Kathleen Wright has taken the lead on the contest to name Western Maryland's Personality Girl, as the end of the competition nears and the list of survivors have been slashed to twelve.

The contest, which is part of the publicity for the Shrine Circus, ends on Sept. 29. Prizes are two trips to the World's Fair, with expenses paid for a week.

The standing of the candidates, according to a bulletin issued last night, now is Kathleen Wright, Janet Kessell, Jeannie Marie Kennell, Myra Jane Valentine, Rita Boyland, Alice Lookenott, Betty Bennett, Norma Grove, Peggy Bischoff, Godetta Hast, Dolores Roeder and Marjorie Sluss.

Frank Smith, publicity director for the Shrine Circus and the personality contest, has requested all remaining candidates to report to the 45 North Liberty street headquarters, Saturday afternoon or evening for final instructions.

Coal Stolen To Warm Baby

Father Set Free To Return Fuel

The father of a 16-day-old baby yesterday told Trial Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. that he swiped three sacks of coal to keep his child warm.

The father, David Folk, of Corriganville, admitted stealing the three sacks of coal from the Cumberland Contracting Company where he was formerly employed. He took the coal to his home in Corriganville, he stated.

Folk said he had been unemployed for a number of weeks and had just obtained work on a Pennsylvania contracting job. However, he had not worked long enough to get a check, he said.

Testimony brought out in Trial Magistrate's Court revealed that Folk had also carted away thirteen other bags of coal and thirty gallons of gasoline prior to the time the new baby was born.

Folk said he had three other children.

Magistrate Bruce sentenced Folk to one year in the House of Correction but suspended sentence on condition that he pay the contracting company for sixteen bags of coal and thirty gallons of gas.

Penny Supper

The Ladies' Aid Society of First Baptist church will hold a penny supper at 5 p. m. today at the church on Bedford street.

Tired of Hitch-Hiking, CCC Boy Just Stole Cars To Ride to Camp

Ralph S. Cole, 18-year-old CCC enrollee, stole automobiles to get back to camp from week-end excursions to Pennsylvania, he revealed yesterday as he was fingerprinted and questioned by federal authorities.

The youth, who confessed to stealing three cars from Uniontown, Pa., within the past few weeks, said he hitch-hiked to Uniontown and then swiped the cars when he was unable to bum rides back to camp.

Cole, a slight youth, with sparkling blue eyes and unruly blond hair, appeared unconcerned over his fate.

Grins at Prison

"They can't give me more than ninety-nine years and a day," he said, grinning.

But he sobered when he was asked if he would like to spend the rest of his life in jail.

"I hope I don't have to," he declared. "I want to do something besides that."

He told the federal officers that he had been convicted of larceny in Pennsylvania in 1937 and placed on probation. About a year later, he was picked up on a similar charge and sentenced to twenty-one months in the Allegheny county (Pa.) jail. He was just recently released on parole after serving seventeen months of the term.

Arrested By Constable

The youth was arrested near Grantsville Tuesday by Garrett County Constable H. A. Hinebaugh and not by State Trooper Carl G. Storm, as was stated in yesterday's News.

Constable Hinebaugh of Oakland, said he nabbed Cole for stealing gas and oil and lodged him in the county jail at Oakland.

Trooper Storm explained that he took the youth from the Garrett jail to locate one of the cars he had hidden in the woods. Then, the officer brought him here to photograph him and take his fingerprints.

Turned Over To Feds

He was subsequently turned over to federal authorities here by Officer Storm with the consent of Garrett county authorities for prosecution under the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act.

United States Deputy Marshal Howard P. Loughrie said that Cole will be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett and will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow afternoon.

Delegation Puts Bee in Bonnets Of Roads Group

Commission Makes No Promise on New Frostburg Highway

A Chamber of Commerce delegation went to Baltimore yesterday to put a bee in the bonnet of the State Roads Commission about the need for a more modern highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

The delegation reported upon return that the bee has been placed and is buzzing busily.

Of course, the State Roads Commission did not make any promise. But, according to Chamber Secretary H. W. Smith, the gentlemen of the present O'Conor - appointed commission did say they had long before realized the need for a better highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

Convinced of Need

Secretary Smith said last night that the roads commission now is "convinced that a better and safer road is needed".

This, they agreed, was clearly demonstrated in the traffic figures and other reports made by Major G. Thompson, spokesman for the Cumberland group, which also included John D. Liebau, C. A. Richards, and Secretary Smith.

Chairman Ezra B. Whitman, of the Roads Commission, told the Cumberlanders at the end of the hour and fifteen minute interview that although the commission appreciated the need for the new road funds were restricted, and that Cumberland - Frostburg project would have to compete on its merits with similar requests from many other parts of the state.

Other Projects Urgent

The commission still has $1,400,000 to spend for road relocation projects during the year beginning Oct. 1, Smith said the delegation was told, but approaches to the new Susquehanna river bridge, changes in crowded Eastern avenue in Baltimore are considered as urgent projects.

The job here would include relocation of U. S. 40 and elimination of such hazards as the Braddock run bridge in LaVale and the railroad crossing at Eckhart, which cost about $400,000. Smith said the federal government might pay half.

The Cumberland delegation proposed that if the commission could not see its way clear to go whole hog on the local project this year, it could still go to work on one stretch between Frostburg and the Six Mile House and on the Braddock run bridge in LaVale and let the rest of the project hold over another year.

"Satisfactory Progress"

Smith reported that the delegation completed its interview with the feeling that satisfactory progress has been made.

The matter now rests in the hands of the roads commission. As Chairman put it, those projects will be approved which are "for the best interests of the most people who use the roads". In other words, as added, the most needed roads would be built first and the Cumberland request would be compared to others before a decision is reached.

Which is a long way from promising anything yet.

Thompson, spokesman for the Cumberland group, said the traffic load between here and Frostburg is the heaviest in Maryland outside the Baltimore area.

Returned to N. Y. As Wife Deserter

A 24-year-old Soders, N. Y., man was on his way back home today—to face charges of deserting his wife and children.

The man, William Siegmyer, was picked up by county officers at the home of a sister in Borden Yard at the request of Sheriff Charles H. Wright, of Wayne county, N. Y.

Siegmyer waived extradition, and Sheriff Wright came for him yesterday, according to Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe.

One of the local breweries is right on the spot with a wall map of Europe advertising its beer. And the map is up to date, too, except for the occupation and partition of Poland.

Such a map will help settle a lot of beery war arguments, and probably start a lot more.

But there's one thing we must not forget. America is free and at peace, while Europe is enslaved by war. And 3,000 miles of ocean water makes the difference — if we stay on our side of the water.

This is a sample of the way lawyers write, lifted from suit papers filed at the court house. We have entitled it, "Legal Hash", or "More of the Same".

". . . a hamburger sandwich, the materials composing which were allowed to be and become in such a bad condition that same were dangerous to persons consuming the same."

—o—

This is the way a circus press agent writes. He is describing Bernice Kelly, soft drink heiress who chose to make her debut under the circus tent instead of in the more orthodox splurge and who is coming here with the Shrine circus.

"Born in the land of cotton and pickaninnies of a prominent and wealthy family, this daring, carefree beauty is typical American and proud of it. She is young, graceful, and athletic. With blue-grey eyes, feathery eye lashes, a gracious curved mouth and clear schoolgirl complexion, blessed with perfect health, and to watch her in action is like watching a feminine tornado of sprightliness."

The circus press agents know how to pack 'em in, all right.

Even the 4-H is bombing us with high-pressure press agentry these days (not that we aren't glad to get it).

This is what we got about the movie they're showing tonight at 8 o'clock at Fairgo's Jockey Club—free of cost.

"The story of the picture is, in effect, the projection of old-fashioned ideals and principals through a colorful and fast-moving drama.

"It has a lot of good sound constructive thinking about agriculture in general and 4-H in particular, but it also has its share of dramatic thrills which involve the sinister doings of a gang of counterfeiters who have a secret rendezvous in a cave near an old farm where the hero—who is a boy just getting interested in 4-H work—and his family live. It moves at a rapid pace through mysterious warnings, shots in the dark, a summer full of hotly contested 4-H projects and competitions, and reaches a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show in Chicago, where the mystery is unraveled and the rascals brought to justice."

There have been movies and movies, but mix old-fashioned ideals and sound constructive thinking about agriculture with sinister doings, shots in the dark, hotly contested 4-H projects, and a smashing climax at the International Livestock Show and you really got something.

And the show is free. The name of it, by the way, is "Under the 4-H Flag."

How To Handle Problem Child Who Won't Eat

Health Department Makes Suggestions Which Should Work

In many Cumberland families, the kids don't get enough to eat. In many others, the mama and papa have difficulty in getting Junior and Mary to eat enough.

Here are some suggestions from the nutritionist of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Maryland State Health Department. They are directed to the mothers who complain, "Junior doesn't have any appetite. I can't get him to eat vegetables. He won't drink milk."

Six suggestions, which should aid in forming good eating habits for the children, are:

1. "Be sure that your child is rested before he goes to the table. A tired child often has little appetite.

2. "Be sure not to coax a child to eat and do not discuss his food habits in his presence. Often a child enjoys being the center of attention, and uses poor food habits as a medium of getting it. Get your child to clear his plate voluntarily by serving him small portions of each kind of food.

Set Good Example

3. "Set youd child a good example. If parents are constantly discussing their own food dislikes their children will feel it necessary to imitate them.

4. "Allow a reasonable time for each meal — 20 to 30 minutes. If the child has not finished, remove the plate without comment and do not offer any food until the next meal.

5. "Discourage eating between meals. A child who eats candy, cookies, ice cream, or quantities of bread and butter between meals cannot be expected to be hungry at meal times. With the exception of the rapidly growing older child, the average child should take nothing but fruit between meals.

Simple Foods Best

6. "Serve your child the right kind of food. Fried food or too many sweets dull the child's appetite, so that he may not wish to eat food he really needs. Simple, well prepared food meets the child's daily needs and should include milk, green vegetables, a second vegetable and potato, orange or tomato and a second fruit, whole grain bread and cereal, an egg, and a serving of meat or fish.

"If your child persists in being a feeding problem, be sure to take him to your family doctor, because there may be some serious reason behind a persistent refusal to eat."

Commission Favors Frederick St. Job

The State Roads Commission looks favorably upon the project to extend Frederick street to a junction with Nave's crossroads, Chairman Ezra B. Whitman told the Cumberland delegation which called on him yesterday.

Whitman also favors some adjustment in the present methods of distributing the state gas tax, H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, said the delegation was told.

The tax is now destributed on a basis of roads mileage in a given locality, rather than on a basis of traffic, taxes paid, or particular needs.

Group Advocates Mountain Top Parking Spaces

Meeting Tomorrow In Hancock Will Plan Attack

Directors of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities, Inc., will meet in Hancock, tomorrow evening to discuss three proposed projects, H. W. Smith, an Allegany director of the group, announced yesterday.

The meeting has been called by President J. H. Gambrill Jr., of Frederick, who has outlined three matters to be considered and acted upon. They are:

1—The appointment of a roads committee to confer with the State Roads Commission regarding the construction of turnouts or parking spaces on the crests of mountains along Route 40. According to President Gambrill the turnouts should start at Braddock Heights and extend to the Maryland-Pennsylvania line.

2—Arrange for a conference with the National Park Service for the purpose of drawing up plans to put the western half of the C & O canal in shape for recreational and conservation purposes.

3—Instigating a program to see to it that Western Maryland has more adequate protection against forest fires.

Commenting on his proposed program, Gambrill stated that any program for establishing turnouts on Route 40 should also include landscaping, beautification, and the possibility of establishing parkways along the route.

Mr. Gambrill state that he had invited Congressman William D. Byron to attend the meeting Friday, since the representative is keenly interested in revamping the old C & O canal.

After corresponding with state forestry officials, Gambrill said he had learned that protection for vast areas of Western Maryland wooded sections is considerably below par. A member of the state department has promised to attend the Hancock meeting, Gambrill said.

The meeting in Hancock will start at 6 p. m., according to Secretary R. B. Wolfe, Allegany county directors who will attend the session are Mr. Smith, Douglas Bowie, and W. M. Race.

Man Armed with Toy Gun Gets One Year in Cut

The story of two suspicious characters who were seen brandishing guns was told yesterday in Trial Magistrates court.

The guns turned out to be toys, but the two men were charged with swiping them from a five and ten here on Sept. 15.

Although the guns were valued at only twenty cents each, one of the men, Elton Armstrong, a Pennsylvanian, was sentenced to the House of Correction for one year.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., said Armstrong had already done four years in his native state for theft. Armstrong seemed pleased with the sentence, preferring the year in the Cut to being returned home as a parole violator.

The second "gunman," Melvin Hardin, of Odessa, Texas, was given a suspended sentence on condition he hit the trail for home. The men said they planned to join a circus here.

Coal Stolen To Warm Baby

Father Set Free To Return Fuel

The father of a 16-day-old baby yesterday told Trial Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. that he swiped three sacks of coal to keep his child warm.

The father, David Folk, of Corriganville, admitted stealing the three sacks of coal from the Cumberland Contracting Company where he was formerly employed. He took the coal to his home in Corriganville, he stated.

Folk said he had been unemployed for a number of weeks and had just obtained work on a Pennsylvania contracting job. However, he had not worked long enough to get a check, he said.

Testimony brought out in Trial Magistrate's Court revealed that Folk had also carted away thirteen other bags of coal and thirty gallons of gasoline prior to the time the new baby was born.

Folk said he had three other children.

Magistrate Bruce sentenced Folk to one year in the House of Correction but suspended sentence on condition that he pay the contracting company for sixteen bags of coal and thirty gallons of gas.

Delegation Puts Bee in Bonnets Of Roads Group

Commission Makes No Promise on New Frostburg Highway

A Chamber of Commerce delegation went to Baltimore yesterday to put a bee in the bonnet of the State Roads Commission about the need for a more modern highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

The delegation reported upon its return that the bee has been placed and is buzzing busily.

Of course, the State Roads Commission did not make any promises. But, according to Chamber Secretary H. W. Smith, the gentlemen of the present O'Conor - appointed commission did say they had not before realized the need for a better highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

Convinced of Need

Secretary Smith said last night that the roads commission now is "convinced that a better and safer road is needed".

This, they agreed, was clearly demonstrated in the traffic figures and other reports made by Major G. Thompson, spokesman for the Cumberland group, which also included John D. Liebau, C. A. Richards, and Secretary Smith.

Chairman Ezra B. Whitman, of the Roads Commission, told the Cumberlanders at the end of the hour and fifteen minute interview that although the commission appreciated the need for the new road, funds were restricted, and that Cumberland - Frostburg project would have to compete on its merits with similar requests from many other parts of the state.

Other Projects Urgent

The commission still has $1,600,000 to spend for road relocation projects during the year beginning Oct. 1, Smith said the delegation was told, but approaches to the new Susquehanna river bridge and changes in crowded Eastern avenue in Baltimore are considered as urgent projects.

The job here would include relocation of U. S. 40 and elimination of such hazards as the Braddock run bridge in LaVale and the railroad crossing at Eckhart, which cost about $400,000. Smith said the federal government might pay half.

The Cumberland delegation proposed that if the commission could not see its way clear to go whole hog on the local project this year it could still go to work on the stretch between Frostburg and the Six Mile House and on the Braddock run bridge in LaVale and let the rest of the project hold over another year.

"Satisfactory Progress"

Smith reported that the delegation completed its interview with the feeling that satisfactory progress has been made.

The matter now rests in the hands of the roads commission. As Chairman put it, those projects will be approved which are "for the best interests of the most people who use the roads". In other words, he added, the most needed roads would be built first and the Cumberland request would be compared to others before a decision is reached.

Which is a long way from promising anything yet.

Thompson, spokesman for the Cumberland group, said the traffic load between here and Frostburg is the heaviest in Maryland outside the Baltimore area.

County Treasurer Asks Divorce After His Wife Drops Her Suit

County Treasurer Frederick C. (Buck) Dreyer yesterday filed suit for an absolute divorce from Mrs. Lucie Z. Dreyer.

Docketing of the suit by Attorney Frederick A. Puderbaugh following by just a week Mrs. Dreyer's withdrawal of a similar suit against her husband.

Dreyer charges infidelity and desertion.

The bill of complaint says that the couple was married here in March, 1903, and lived together until October, 1932. It adds that, prior to October, 1932, Dreyer learned that his wife had been unfaithful and left her for this reason, but that a reconciliation was subsequently effected.

From October, 1932, to March 6 of this year, the defendant "refused him his marital rights, although they lived under the same roof," the suit alleges.

Ordered To Vacate

The bill further recites that on March 6, of this year, Mrs. Dreyer deserted him, in effect, by obtaining a court order requiring him to vacate and remain away from their home. The court order was obtained when Mrs. Dreyer, through Attorney F. Brooke Whiting, filed suit for divorce from the county official on grounds of desertion.

After asking that testimony in the case be taken in open court rather than before a court examiner, Mrs. Dreyer ordered the suit dismissed on Wednesday of last week.

The suit filed yesterday by Dreyer says that his wife's alleged desertion revives his right to seek a divorce on grounds of infidelity.

(Ordinarily, under Maryland law, charges of infidelity cannot be raised in a divorce action, if after discovering the infidelity, the plaintiff continues or returns to live with the erring mate.)

Asks Property Settlement

In asking for an "equitable distribution" of property together with an absolute decree, Dreyer took occasion to criticize his wife for working during the time they were living together. Mrs. Dreyer is operator of a beauty shop.

The suit says that all monies, real estate, and personal property amassed through Dreyer's individual efforts and their joint efforts were placed in his wife's name, together with property she amassed "at the expense of her companionship and wifely duties" to him.

Mrs. Dreyer was reported out of the city yesterday.

Tired of Hitch-Hiking, CCC Boy Just Stole Cars To Ride to Camp

Ralph S. Cole, 18-year-old CCC enrollee, stole automobiles to get back to camp from week-end excursions to Pennsylvania, he revealed yesterday as he was fingerprinted and questioned by federal authorities.

The youth, who confessed to stealing three cars from Uniontown, Pa., within the past few weeks, said he hitch-hiked to Uniontown and then swiped the cars when he was unable to bum rides back to camp.

Cole, a slight youth, with sparkling blue eyes and unruly blond hair, appeared unconcerned over his fate.

Grins at Prison

"They can't give me more than ninety-nine years and a day," he said, grinning.

But he sobered when he was asked if he would like to spend the rest of his life in jail.

"I hope I don't have to," he declared. "I want to do something besides that."

He told the federal officers that he had been convicted of larceny in Pennsylvania in 1937 and placed on probation. About a year later, he was picked up on a similar charge and sentenced to twenty-one months in the Allegheny county (Pa.) jail. He was just recently released on parole after serving seventeen months of the term.

Arrested By Constable

The youth was arrested near Grantsville Tuesday by Garrett County Constable H. A. Hinebaugh and not by State Trooper Carl G. Storm, as was stated in yesterday's News.

Constable Hinebaugh of Oakland, said he nabbed Cole for stealing gas and oil and lodged him in the county jail at Oakland.

Trooper Storm explained that he took the youth from the Garrett jail to locate one of the cars he had hidden in the woods. Then, the officer brought him here to photograph him and take his fingerprints.

Turned Over To Feds

He was subsequently turned over to federal authorities here by Officer Storm with the consent of Garrett county authorities for prosecution under the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act.

United States Deputy Marshal Howard P. Loughrie said that Cole will be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett and will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow afternoon.
